NAZIS HALTED AT VORONEZH

American Ambush Led Japs to Slaughter In Midway Island Battle, Navy Reveals

Reds Thwart Enemy Attempt To Circle City

Nazis Forced Back In One Sector After Making Break-Through, Russians Say; Soviet Army Holds In Big Bend Area Along Don River.

(By Associated Press)

MOSCOW—The Germans, stopped by a last ditch defense at the outskirts of Voronezh, have attempted to encircle the city but were repulsed on the north and hurled back on the south to the point where they crossed the Don river, Russian dispatches reported today.

The Russians said that a break-through accomplished by large numbers of fresh German troops and hundreds of tanks supported by a heavy artillery barrage had carried the invaders almost to the edge of the town before they were checked by the spirited Russian stand.

The dispatches did not give the location of the break-through, but it was indicated that it occurred at the western approaches to Voronezh.

The Russians said that in forcing the Nazis back they recaptured a small railroad crossing and in another sector applied such strong pressure that the Germans fell back across a small bridge and destroyed it.

The fighting was described as reaching the height of its fury with German losses so terrific that the third German motorized infantry division which appeared in the battle line only yesterday was reported depleted and replaced by the new 168th motorized division after a single day of combat.

Invasion gains in the Voronezh area were declared to have cost Germany more than 35,000 men, killed and wounded, in ten days, and the Soviet information bureau tacitl, brought up again the issue of establishment of a second front in western Europe by indicating German forces there are being weakened.

"The Germans are being forced to bring up reserves hurriedly from the rear to take the place of their units which have been put out of action" a communique said "Several divisions which arrived from France and Belgium only a few days ago have been observed."

Fighting about Voronezh, 300 miles south of Moscow was reported attended by "varying successes."

The situation remained grave, but a Russian dispatch said the Russians summoned strength for several counter-attacks and recaptured one important position west of Voronezh together with a forest. The battle was said to be at the height of its fury.

Without specifying the exact locality, the information bureau said Soviet soldiers had repulsed an enemy drive and followed this up with a counter-attack.

"In another sector, several enemy attacks were beaten off," it reported.

Soviet soldiers defending the big bend country south of Boguchar, after a series of withdrawals, were reported to have stopped a regiment of Nazi infantry and wiped out more than 700 of its effectives.

Although the Red army counter blows in the Voronezh area were increasing in force, Soviet dispatches pointed out that there was no reason for easy optimism as to the city's fate They said the Germans hourly were sending fresh troops across the Don to develop the battle spreading out on the east bank.

"The menace is great," said Pravda, the Communist party newspaper.

Detailed Story of Victory Tells How U. S. Sank 20 Out of 80 Invading Ships, Killed 4,800 of Enemy.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Japan's invasion armada ran into an American ambush in the battle of Midway, official reports disclosed today.

A communique last night gave the first detailed account of the battle and a supplemental report told how a naval task force lay in ambush and struck hard with carrier planes when army and navy shore-based attacks had slowed the enemy fleet.

The great size of the armada Japan sent to assault Midway in hopeful prelude to conquest of Hawaii was disclosed for the first time—80 ships. Official records gave this result of the battle:

JAPANESE LOSSES—20 ships sunk or damaged including four aircraft carriers sunk and three battleships hit 275 planes destroyed, and 4,800 men killed or drowned.

AMERICAN LOSSES—The 19,900-ton aircraft carrier Yorktown put out of action the destroyer Hammann sunk, an undisclosed number of planes destroyed, and 92 officers and 215 enlisted men lost Loss of the destroyer and damage to an aircraft carrier had been reported previously, but this was the first time their names were given.

The immediate result of the battle was that the safety of the vital Hawaiian area, the American west coast and the Panama canal were at least temporarily secured.

The navy issued in exultant detail its first story of the "superb acts of devotion" mentioned by Prime Minister Churchill in parliament July 2, when he told for the first time that "from some successful attacks on Japanese carriers only one (American) aircraft returned out of ten."

One action the navy cited was by Navy Torpedo Squadron No. 8—30 men and 15 planes led by Lieut. Cmdr John Charles Waldron, 41, of Fort Pierre, S. D This squadron successfully attacked the enemy's main battle force without fighter support and in spite of blistering anti-aircraft and fighter opposition. All 15 planes were lost. Only one man of the squadron Ensign G. H. Gay of Houston, Tex survived.

Another deed of valor was attributed to Lt. Col. Lofton R. Henderson of Lorain, O. During the marines' first attack on the Japanese fleet on June 4, his scout bomber was hit and set aflame. Col. Henderson was last seen diving his blazing craft into the smokestack of a Japanese carrier.

PREPARING SPY HELPERS' TRIAL

Officials See Prospect of Son Testifying Against His Parents.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Raising the prospect that a son may testify against his parents and husband against his wife, justice department officials today were conducting a series of conferences to determine the procedure for prosecuting the 14 alleged contacts of the eight Nazi saboteurs now on trial for their lives before a military commission

While the saboteur trial entered its seventh day with the admission that it still would be 'several days" before it ends Attorney General Francis Biddle and Wendell Berge, chief of the criminal division of the justice department, conducted meetings to map plans for trial of the 14 accomplices

The fact that Biddle called District Attorney J. Albert Woll, of Chicago, District Attorney Mathias F. Correa of New York City and District Attorney Harold M. Kennedy of Brooklyn to Washington indicated that civil court trials may be ordered

The most sensational one is expected to be the case involving plain, stolid-looking Mrs. Maria Kerling, 38, the wife of John Edward Kerling, one of the German agents now on trial. According to FBI, Mrs. Kerling was "intimately associated" with Ernest Herman Kerkhof, a man two years her junior, for more than a year while husband Kerling was away from home attending a sabotage school near Berlin.

While a husband cannot be forced to testify against his wife,

'With the army and navy taking so many physicians and nurses, we know there will be a shortage by fall and someone will be neglected," Dr Wild said "The situation will be much worse if an epidemic of diphtheria should break out in the schools."

Three Ohioans, One a Mansfielder, Play Vital Roles In U. S. Triumph at Midway

Sawhill Was Member of Daring Squadron Japs Wiped Out.

Three Ohioans, one of them a Mansfield sailor, were listed today by the Navy as among those who played vital roles in the battle of Midway.

The Mansfield sailor cited was William F Sawhill, 22, crew member with the squadron of 15 torpedo planes which failed to return from the sea fight but was credited by officers with making the Midway victory possible.

Also honored was Capt. Elliott Buckmaster, 52, of Columbus, who commanded the aircraft carrier Yorktown whose planes located and participated in the sinking of the Japanese carrier Hiryu The Yorktown later was put out of action but her planes operated from other carriers.

The third Ohioan listed by the Navy was Major Lofton R. Henderson of the U. S. Marine aviation corps, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Henderson, Lorain, and a graduate of U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis.

During the marines' first attack on the Japanese fleet on June 4, Henderson's scout bomber was hit and set aflame. He was last seen diving his flaming and disabled craft into the smokestack of a Japanese aircraft carrier.

Henderson's brother, Paul, is also a marine corps officer.

Although Sawhill was singled out for heroism, his mother, Mrs. Earl Sawhill, 409 West Fourth street, was pleased but not excited by the recognition.

"My only hope is that this encourages more mothers to pray for their sons," she said. "The greatest thing to me is in knowing that he was ready to meet his Lord when he died."

Sawhill wrote a letter to his parents just before taking off on his last flight and asked his commanding officer to mail it if he failed to return

"We may go down at sea and turn up weeks or even years later," he wrote He recalled an incident of three sailors being rescued after 45 days on a rubber raft.

Sawhill, a radio man and gunner, was a member of Torpedo Squadron No. 8, "suicide" unit which hunted out the Japanese fleet after the American navy had lost contact with it and paved the way for the victory.

Legislator Who Saw Libyan Fighting Raps Piecemeal Attacks on Enemy.

(Editor's Note Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., (R., Mass.) the only member of the United States senate who has participated in the fighting of the war, urges in the following article written exclusively for International News Service, that the United States deliver solid, hard, victory blows against the enemy and not dissipate its strength in piecemeal efforts. NEW FRONT?: Say Japs Mass Fleet for Likely Jab at Reds

(By Associated Press)

Apparently by coincidence, London sources voiced opinions today that the Japanese main fleet is concentrating in home waters and that a smashing German victory in Russia would precipitate a Japanese attack on Soviet Siberia.

Simultaneously the Tokyo radio broadcast a report that Foreign Minister Shigenori Togo speaking at Osaka, disclosed that the Soviet government had assured Japan that Moscow's mutual assistance pact with Britain and her agreement with the United States contain no provisions regarding Japan.

The Japanese foreign minister told his hearers that relations between Japan and the Soviet Union continue to be covered by their 1941 neutrality treaty

Qualified sources in London, however, predicted that Japan might be the first to open a new front in the world conflict—against Russia's Far Eastern armies—in an effort to capitalize on Germany's assaults in European Russia.

The Chinese have long insisted that this was on the Axis agenda, citing concentrations of Japanese forces in Manchukuo, as opposed to a relative quiescence elsewhere.

Official circles in London say the Japanese main fleet probably is concentrating in Japanese waters of the North Pacific. The direct cause for this was said to be the naval losses suffered by the Japanese in the battles of the Coral sea and Midway

Four carriers were lost among the 20 Japanese warships damaged or destroyed by ambush at Midway, the U. S. navy announced last night, in a final tabulation of the battle score. A United States air-

TRY AGAIN: Axis Forces Make Third Lunge at Egypt Defense

(By United Press)

CAIRO—Field Marshal Erwin Rommel has thrown his Axis tank and infantry forces into a third attempt to break the British front at the hill of Jesus on the coastal end of the Alamein line, a communique said today.

Battered back with heavy losses in two previous smashes at the line, Rommel sent his forces including units of the German Afrika korps against the hill west of El Alamein late yesterday

Fighting continued into the night with the result still in doubt.

The Axis forces attacked a section of the line where Australian infantrymen and tank, armored car and artillery units of Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck's 8th army hurled back the Germans and Italians Sunday and Monday.

A dispatch from Richard D. McMillan, at the battle line, reported that at dusk Monday the Germans were bringing up reinforcements.

On the relatively quiet central and southern stretches of the front, extending down to the Qattara depression, minor patrol and tank column forays were noted in a communique of the Middle Eastern command and the Royal Air Force.

It was indicated that Rommel might be feeling out the British strength there.

NAZIS HALTED IN SHARP FIGHT NEAR VORONEZH

Russians Thwart Attempt of Foe to Circle City After Break-Through.

thousands of soldiers were fighting from behind every natural barrier and ground obstacle, while tanks charged over a battleground ablaze with fire and plumed with smoke.

German dive bombers continued attempt to break up the Red army formations, Russian dispatches said. The Red air force still was showing considerable strength in the whole Don valley battle area, they added.

German troops were reported in a Reuters dispatch from Stockholm—unconfirmed in other quarters—to have crashed through Mius river defenses at Pokrovsk, north of Nazi-held Taganrog, and driven to within six miles of Rostov, but failed to hold.

A spearhead striking down the Donets river has reached Voroshilovgrad, 100 miles north of Rostov, the Reuters dispatch declared.

(The Berlin radio said Red army forces counter-attacking west of Voronezh against the Nazi left wing had been surrounded.)

The Soviet information bureau noted particularly violent fighting yesterday in the area of Voronezh and to the south of Boguchar.

A fresh withdrawal was acknowledged in one sector.

Spasmodic action was indicated on the Kalinin front, northwest of Moscow. Red army troops "broke into the outskirts of a populated place" in a counter-attack after the repulse of a tank-led German thrust, the Soviet information bureau said.

Leningrad front fighters were reported to have destroyed numerous Nazi guns and an ammunition dump and killed more than 400 Germans in three days of fighting.

Reds Renew Pleas For Second Front

LONDON—(AP)—Soviet Russia was reported by qualified London sources today to be pressing anew for the prompt opening of a second, American-British European land front to divert the Nazi armies pounding at the gates of the vital Caucasus.

These sources, who insisted on anonyamity, pointed out the eventual peril that Japan might open a second front in Siberia to distract the harried Red army if the Nazis can set the stage for it.

A smashing victory for the Germans in the battle for the Caucasian approaches, they predicted, would be followed by a Japanese attack on Siberian Russia. Japan was said to have massed at least 24 divisions—about 360,000 men—in Manuchukuo with air reinforcements from home.

August and September are the best months for campaigning in Siberia, according to these sources. They noted there are no signs of large scale Japanese activity elsewhere on the Pacific front.

Whatever the pros and cons, public sympathy for the reported renewed pleading of Soviet Ambassador Ivan Maisky was demonstrated in mass meetings over the week-end at Glasgow and Liverpool. Both demanded a new front and all aid for Russia.

Soviet strategists, whose names may not be mentioned, say they are not satisfied that the British air offensive, hampered lately by bad weather, is a heavy enough threat to divert German troops.

On the other hand, military sources here foresee a second front as more than just a big hit-and-run affair—one requiring exhaustive preparation. And they do not believe, the say, the situation in southern Russia has reached a point where an American-British invasion of the continent is essential to have Russia's armies from being overrun.

Although the Russians are being driven back, they said, there is no indication that any of the main Soviet armies had been broken or surrounded by the advancing Germans.

The condition of the Red air force after more than a year of constant fighting also is worrying experts here who said they believed the effect of heavy German air reinforcements already was being felt on the battlefront.

RAF Resumes Attacks On Nazi-Held Bases

LONDON—(AP)—Fine weather for flying returned today and the RAF's fighters went to work again on Nazi installations on French soil across the channel.

Several squadrons were assigned to morning operations. Strong formations of planes roared over Folkstone shortly before noon returning from the direction of Cap Griz Nez.

Adverse weather kept British bombers from raiding Germany overnight, an informed source said.

terials, manpower and womanpower, to outbuild the Axis. We wrote the book on mass production. The world for years has marvelled at our ability to produce goods in huge quantities. The assembly line is an American creation.

Germany stole the book a decade ago and under cover amassed great arsenals, huge armies and a pack of side lines, such as world-wide propaganda and organized saboteurs. Hitler got a head start, but the evidence now indicates that we are overtaking him in producing the sinews of war.

A glance at the war map clearly indicates that Germany and her satellites in Europe have overrun many countries. Japan likewise has made vast territorial acquisitions in the Pacific. I am confident that we will win, but this does not mean we have an easy road to victory.

I do not want to give the enemy a possible shred of comfort by making any prediction on when or where we will strike him, but it seems to me that when we do strike with our land forces it should be on a huge scale — not a half-way measure.

We Americans prefer to do things in a big way. Every problem we tackle we do so with our full might, with great enthusiasm and with a do or die spirit. That is the way, I believe we will finish off Hitler and his gang of world troublemakers.

When I was in Libia and Egypt last May and June on active duty as a major of our armored forces I gathered enough first-hand knowledge to satisfy me that our country is faced by a resourceful enemy — but not a super race. They had a lot of details worked out before they set the world aflame in war.

When we strike the enemy we ought to have our own command—our own area on the battle-front. That will be better for all of the United Nations—better for our British allies and better for us. In this way we will not cancel out the national traits in warfare of each country.

While I believe our troops should be familiarized with the way British troops operate and the British should know our tactics in warfare, it seems to me that the best way to obtain the maximum results would be for our troops to operate as separate entities in the battle line.

Convoys Guarding Merchant Ships In Caribbean Waters

(By Associated Press)

United Nations merchantmen plying the Caribbean now are operating under the convoy system already in effect along the U. S. east coast, and submarine-challenging naval escorts soon will aid shipping in the Gulf of Mexico.

This extension of the convoy system to hitherto unprotected water was disclose yesterday by Navy Secretary Knox as two more reported sinkings put at 371 the unofficial Associated Press tabulation of wartime western Atlantic ship losses.

"We are getting various patrol vessels to combat submarines into service as rapidly as possible and are increasing the number of patrol planes with equal expedition," Knox told newsmen in New York during an inspection tour of the eastern seaboard.

it was reported that Kerling may do so because of his wife's association with Kerkhof. The latter also is under arrest as one of those who aided and sheltered the eight saboteurs after the spies were landed on American shores by Nazi submarines in the daring plot to sabotage American war industries.

Another dramatic episode is looming in the case of Herbert Haupt, 22, of Chicago, the youngest of the saboteurs on trial. Haupt's parents—Mr. and Mrs. Hans Max Haupt—and his uncle and aunt.— Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wilhelm Froehling— have been seized for aiding the young spy, and are among the 14 being held.

Federal authorities have not as yet decided whether Kerling will be taken to New York and Haupt to Chicago as witnesses at the trial of the accomplices. However, it was certain that their confessions, together with special sworn depositions from them, will be used as part of the evidence.

The announcement on how the accomplices will be prosecuted will be made within the next two days, it was learned. Treason, or conspiracy to commit treason charges, are expectd to be filed against them. If the accusation is conspiracy, it will be possible to try all of them at one time in one court and not hold separate trials in Chicago and in New York. As an alternative, a military commission can decide their fate but such a step would require a presidential order.

Under treason statutes, two witnesses must testify against the accused. Conviction carries a sentence of from five years, to life, to death.

Department of justice officials refused to speculate on whether the executions of the eight Nazi saboteurs, if they are convicted, will be delayed until the 14 can be tried.

FDR CHECKS ON WAR SITUATION

Cancels Engagements To Study Battle Reports.

WASHINGTON — (INS) — The White House announced today that President Roosevelt swept his morning clear of engagements and spent the entire time on the telephone "checking and double checking" on the war situation.

This was prompted by some unfavorable war reports from some battle fronts and the increasing clamour developing both in the United States and England for the immediate establishmen of a second front.

NEW YORK — (AP) — A former American coast guardsman was held in $25,000 bail today on espionage charges.

Assistant FBI Director P. E. Foxworth said the accused spy, Washington Glendale Spiegelberg, 35, had on his person plans of the B-24 type bomber when arrested in a Long Island bar Sunday.

THREE OHIOANS HAD VITAL PART IN U. S. VICTORY

Mansfield Sailor Was in One Plane of Entire Squadron of 15 That Was Lost.

Sawhill flew in one of the 15 planes in the squadron. None of the 15 planes came back and only one of the 30 crew members survived the battle.

Torpedo Squadron No. 8 was given credit for crippling Jap air power at the start of the battle and for making the victory possible.

Sawhill was a member of the squadron whose leader, Lieut. Commander John C. Waldron, volunteered "to share any mission, regardless of the consequence." The squadron was sent out to find the Japanese force which had been sighted moving toward Midway but which had been lost when it diverted its course.

Squadron 8 found the "lost" Japanese force and attacked, although it had no fighter support to divert enemy defensive fire.

"The sky swarmed with Jap Zeros," said the Navy's detailed report issued yesterday, "and a seemingly impenetrable screen of cruisers and destroyers protected its carriers. Nevertheless No. 8 deliberately presesd home its attack at short range. Plane after plane of the group was shot down in flames."

Planes left in the sky launched torpedoes at enemy carriers and made certain "that the Jap's air power was crippled at the start," the navy reported.

Forty minutes later, a second American squadron arrived at the scene but only one man of No. 8 survived.

He was Ensign C. H. Gay, Houston, Tex., whose plane was shot down but who managed to inflate his rubber boat when his plane struck the water. He remained in the vicinity of the battle un-noticed by the enemy and had a sort of water level view of the battle as it raged. When enemy planes flew over, he covered his head to avoid detection. He was picked up later by American vesesls.

"My boy is just one among millions," said Mrs. Hendersor, of Lorain, when she learned that her aviator son had crashed his burning plane into a Jap carrier.

"I'm deeply proud of him but countless other sons and mothers are going through the same thing," she said.

Major Henderson had been notified that he had been recommended for promotion to the rank of lieutenant-colonel just before his departure for the war zone in in April. However, since navy communiques referred to him as major, it was believed that formal action on his promotion had not yet been completed at the time of his death.

A fellow marine told his superiors he was convinced Henderson's diving into the smokestack of a Jap carrier was deliberate.

Henderson's parents have another son in the marine corps, Capt. Paul Henderson, stationed in the field artillery on the west coast.

TRUCK OWNERS GET WAR RULES

ODT Official to Explain Set-up At Meeting Thursday.

Mansfield truck operators and owners of delivery systems of all types will be told of various defense regulations for common carrier operation at a meeting in the Chamber of Commerce rooms at 8 p. m. Thursday.

Rules providing tire and fuel conservation, return load provisions and other data vitally concerning the trucking industry will be discussed.

Invitations to all private and public carriers were sent out Wednesday by John G. Routzon, secretary-manager of the Chamber of Commerce. All owners and operators in the Mansfield area are urged to attend.

DAYTON CITY WORKERS STRIKE

Skeleton Crew Continues to Run Water Works.

DAYTON —(AP)— Employes of the city water, street and sewage disposal systems struck today demanding 10 per cent wage increases. Pickets marched before the city hall and the waterworks.

Officials estimated that about 98 per cent of the departments' 448 employes were out. A skeleton crew continued to operate the water works and no threat of a shortage was seen. The other departments were closed down.

The union recently demanded the wage hike, a 44-hour week with time-and-a-half for overtime, and union security. City officials said the average worker's pay now ranges from $23 to $35 weekly, with a few making $50.

boards make it compulsory that all pupils be immunized before they enter school in the fall to make sure there won't be an epidemic at a time when medical care will be difficult to obtain," he commented.

Supt. W. L. Miller of Mansfield schools said he would submit Dr. Wild's request to the board of education for action Monday night.

Five rural school boards in the county made immunization compulsory last year and are expected to repeat their requests this fall, according to the health commissioner. They are in the Shiloh, Lexington, Bellville, Lucas, and Ontario districts.

The National Youth administration camp at Mifflin also requires enrollees to be immunized against diphtheria.

"We were able to avoid two epidemics last fall by the prompt use of anti-toxins, and there's no reason why anyone should take chances when 100 per cent protection against diphtheria is available," Dr. Wild asserted.

"If all school children are immunized, in eight or 10 years an entire generation would be protected against the disease," he added.

The Mansfield schools and others in the county require all pupils and teachers to be vaccinated against smallpox before the new term begins.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, JULY 15, 1942.

Inspiring example: Senator George W. Norris, at 81, looking toward the future with calm confidence.

It now appears that some of those isolationist congressmen may soon find themselves isolated in their own district.

A Fordham seismologist says Japan is due for another big earthquake soon—and any co-operation along that line will be appreciated.

Advantage In Sharing Rides

POSSIBLY not until more motorists begin to feel the actual pinch of gasoline restriction and wornout tires, will the "share-a-ride" movement receive the serious consideration it deserves.

This co-operative plan is already in effect, to some extent, in the Mansfield area, among workers who are required to travel long distances to and from their jobs, but there has been little response to the suggestion insofar as local employment is concerned, and the luxury of riding alone is still being indulged in to a greater extent than is justified by fair consideration of prospects that either cars or tires for civilian use can be replaced within another two or three years.

General application of the "share-a-ride" plan would keep many thousands of cars in condition for necessary driving much longer than will otherwise be possible.

Impetus will probably be given to the movement locally by committee activity designed to study the situation, encourage "share-car" co-operation by industrial employes, and, if practicable, "stagger" work hours so as to relieve traffic congestion periods.

Personnel of the committee appointed by Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch, chairman of the Mansfield civilian defense committee, inspires confidence that action will be immediate and effective.

Gadget Inventors Keeping Busy

THIS PERIOD of history may be called by future historians the "Gadget Civilization." Americans have probably produced bigger, better and more varied gadgets than all other nations of all historic eras together. So it is natural that nimble-minded citizens of the Yankee type are already busy with ideas for production of a still greater wave of gadgets after the war.

Already experts are said to be figuring on new miracles of standardization and mass production when the present stand-still is over. It seems as if the country will then be overwhelmed with old and new devices to make life easier—or at least more varied and interesting.

Yet many people are left cold by this prospect. Some even have the nerve to ask whether Yankee gadgets and gimcracks have really done so much for civilization as Americans seem to assume. Is it a deluge of new mechanical devices and methods that the world needs, they ask, or is it a new spirit and a fresh look at life? Is it patents and profits that people should be concerned with or a revival of American ideals and a renovation of the American soul?

Broadening Freedom for Women

THEY MIGHT be called Amazons, after the fabled female warriors of ancient times. Yet those trim, martial young women heading for Des Moines, Ia., to train as officers in the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, look feminine enough in their "civvies." And even in their uniforms, too, when you become accustomed to them. And it doesn't really seem fair to call 'em "WAACS."

How the status of women has changed in a generation! It started in the last war, when girls emancipated themselves into trousers. Since then, with "freedom broadening slowly down from precedent to precedent," like the British constitution, they have risen above nearly every other kind of restriction, sartorial, occupational, athletic and so on. Now there seems to be dawning on the world a feminine branch of military service which goes far beyond the nursing stage of Florence Nightingale, and almost amounts to a women's army.

Temperamental Americans

RUSSELL REEVES, an American writer on current events, comments that this war is bringing out "a mercurial temperament hitherto unsuspected"—that we rise to peaks of optimism and then sink into pits of depression.

If this is true, the American public might be likened to the mercury rising and falling in a thermometer with every change of temperature. Or to the fabled "Herald Mercury, new-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill," when a victory is announced, then plunging down into a bog when defeat comes.

Such instability is not in keeping with present needs. These times demand, above everything else, hardness, toughness, endurance. Only the man or nation "that endureth unto the end" shall be saved.

Gin Succumbs To War Economy

GIN is to disappear from the market, but whisky will continue. That is one of the odder by-products of war economy. As both gin and whisky are made from grain, they might be expected to be rationed equally—that both would be available, even if in lesser quantities.

Competition is the explanation. Distillers, it seems, are afraid to let their brands of whisky disappear from the market, lest their rivals get the business permanently. So, whether by agreement or not, all unite in dropping gin and hanging on to whisky.

Guard Against Timberland Fires

WASTE of resources caused by forest fires is almost too great to contemplate. Most of this waste is wholly unnecessary. The cigaret stub can be put out. The camp fire, also, can be taken care of. No camping or picnic party should ever leave its fire until it is safely and completely extinguished.

These fires are bad enough in times of peace. They take the labor of men and horses. They take lives, sometimes of people and always of birds and animals. In time of war they are inexcusable.

It is recalled that at this point in the first World war, a song of the day was "All the World Is Waiting for the Sunrise"—so the sun rose for awhile and then went under an even darker cloud.

IF WE HAVE HELP TO GIVE, NOW IS THE TIME

China's War Reports Tell Truth

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WHEN Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's Chungking government makes an announcement concerning the progress of its country's war with the Japs it's accepted in Washington and doubtless at the rest of the United Nations' capitals without doubting a fraction of one per cent of its accuracy.

Chiang Kai-shek

This isn't true of reports from others of the pending conflict's various fields of activity.

The British, telling of developments in North Africa, always emphasize whatever gains they've made so vehemently that they're a bit suspected of exaggerating. If they have to admit a reverse, they qualify it almost unbelievably. The Russians, belatedly conceding the loss of some such stronghold as Sevastopol, never fail to remark that, "Oh, well, it was left in ruins," and that the enemy's sacrifices were literally appalling.

The Germans do the same thing. Their stories are regarded with a barrel of salt each, anyway.

Italy isn't often heard from, hopefully or contrariwise.

Coral Sea and Midway.

As between the United States and Japan there's room for skepticism. Military and navy men surely know exactly which outfit had a deal the better of the scraps in the Coral Sea and at Midway. The public, though, can't but wonder, if the Japs' defeats in those engagements were as overwhelming as the American press has represented 'em. We weren't LICKED, it's true, but were the results greatly better than a tie each?—so far as actual fighting was concerned. If we WON clean-cut, why didn't we utterly exterminate the opposition?

And the Aleutians?

It's all right to say that the Japs' diggings in there were facilitated by Aleutian weather, but why was it any worse weather for us than for the Nippon aggregation?

All this isn't to imply that the United Nations aren't winning in general, but press agentry creates considerable uncertainty as to current details.

The Chinese, however, haven't any press agentry.

What they accomplish or what happens to 'em they TELL.

If they say there's some spot where they've been thumped, they proclaim it.

If they say they've registered a wallop against the Mikado, the bet's a safe one.

It's a queer country.

Being so close together as they are, and both Mongolians, why aren't the Chinese and Japs brethren? But they're not. Far from it.

In the old days of the Boxer Rebellion, the Japs were ardently pro-Caucasian. Today we and the Chinese are anti-Jap and then some.

When we barred Oriental immigration, we classed 'em together. I'll bet the Chinese could get in now, if they weren't too busy to attend to it.

I've lived among both of 'em.

Generalizing, I've liked the Chinese best.

Yet, as individuals, I've had Jap friends who were as close to me as any Occidental. I'd have hated to lose one of 'em as much as I would have a Briton. They're just as civilized as we are.

That Military Class.

The dope is that we don't need to civilize the bulk of Japan.

We need to civilize its MILITARY CLASS. China doesn't need any de-militarization. It's GOT it. Japan's just ONE GROUP. That disposed of, it's okay.

Seemingly nobody's left out of consideration but the Germans.

And yet, the Germans, as transplanted in this country in past years, have been as respectable local and world citizens as anybody.

Obviously nationalities and races don't signify any more. It's a mere issue of human beings.

Listen World!

Stop Pooshing!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

ONE of our senators—Ellison D. Smith of South Carolina—broadcast to the whole cock-eyed world that he was going to continue to wear cuffs on his trousers, by gosh 'n' by gum, and no doggone "administrator" was going to prevent him. To which I respond with enthusiastic whoops.

Now, get me right before you begin to cancel your subscription. I'm as sturdy a patriot as they come and I've lived long enough in these United States to know what patriotism means and costs. But I think we're getting downright silly—or worse—in our present terroristic policy of making the common citizen snag into line—or else.

If we want to abolish Gestapo methods, let's go where they originated and whale the tar out of the crooks and bullies that originated them. But if we want to save a free land, for Pete's sake let's have a little taste of liberty, equality and justice.

Americans are a very special and spunky breed. They'll do practically anything if you appeal to their pride and loyalty. But they don't like to be pooshed, and there's a growing feeling in this country that if we are to be dominated by tyrants, it might as well be by experts and not by a lot of amateur meddlers in Washington.

Take a senator's pants cuffs for example. All right, let's assume that after 3789 conferences our lords and leaders have decided that we can't afford pants cuffs. Then why not come out and tell us nice? Put it up to us like regular guys. Say that here's a sacrifice to be made and they're counting on our decency to make it. Whereupon I'll bet my last nickel that every regular citizen would comply without a grumble, even though I still can't see why pants cuffs should be so vital to victory.

Or all this concern over our private tires. We automobile owners are great big boys and girls now. If we want to make fools out of ourselves by wrecking our tires, that seems to me to be one of our inalienable rights. Why not put it up to us in just that way? Say to us, All right, Smarty, liquidate your automobile if you want to. You bought it and it's yours to throw away. But don't expect a hard-pressed government to weep over you when you're done so. Or come whining around asking us to forgive and forget. If you haven't any tires when these are gone, that will be just your bad luck and nothing else but.

That's American language, the kind of talk we've been able to comprehend and with which we can cooperate. But are the powers that be handing out that line now

No. That's not how it's done. We're just told to snip our trousers and freeze our tires, or else!

Then there's this matter of women's skirts. Women have been ordered to dispense with pleats in their skirts and keep them at a length which barely dusts the knee cap—if any. Lovely idea! How about gals like me, and the Statue of Liberty? Where'd we be if you took our pleats away? Wearing a sarong! All right, just let them try it. If there are to be any of these strip tease acts I'll originate them myself and not on a ukase from Washington, Moscow, Berlin or Tokyo.

I repeat, I'm a hundred percent patriot. I've lived for my country and I would cheerfully die for it. Though not without a few remarks. Moreover I'm convinced that we'll win this shindig and should make every reasonable sacrifice therefor. But I'm not at all enthusiastic at some of the methods we're using, or the prospect which may await us thereafter.

For remember, there will be a peace some day. But who'll want it if you'll have to consult Washington, D. C., every time you wash your ears or plant a row of carrots? "Give me liberty," says I, "but don't scare me pink before you give it."

IF WE'RE GOING TO SAVE THE AMERICAN WAY OF LIFE LET'S HEW TO THAT AMERICAN WAY OF LIFE RIGHT NOW, AND LEAVE US OUR PANTS AND OUR PLEATS.

Russian Hint of Reserve Strength Buoys Hope Despite Nazi Gains

—By LOUIS F. KEEMLE

A HINT that Russia has large forces in reserve and is capable of starting a counter-offensive against the Germans, especially in conjunction with an offensive by the United Nations, has appeared in the Communist newspaper Pravda.

It was embodied in an article by Gregory Alexandroff, Communist party propaganda chief, who made an inferential bid for the early opening of a second front by the United Nations in accordance with the understanding reached by Russia with Britain and the United States.

The article appears to throw some light on the nature of that understanding. During the visit of the Soviet foreign commissar to London and Washington, Russia presumably gave the Allies some idea of its armed strength and of its ability to withstand the Germans if given proper help. Molotov expressed complete satisfaction with the assurance given by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

Although the Russians now are being hard pressed on the Voronezh front, where the Germans have broken through and are threatening Rostov, Stalingrad and the Caucasus, there has been no open demand by Moscow for an immediate Allied military expedition against the Germans. Presumably the Russians still are satisfied with the arrangements made and are relying on the United Nations not to let them down.

If so, it is an encouraging thought at a time when the Germans are at the peak of their major summer offensive and have scored successes both on the southern and central fronts.

THE SITUATION on the southern front is not any too clear. Shortly after the Russians admitted a German break-through near Voronezh, the Red Star, Soviet army newspaper said the Russians had started a strong counter-attack on a wide front there.

Russian withdrawals near Rzhev, northwest of Moscow, and around Voronezh, need not be viewed with too much pessimism. The main German effort is in the Voronezh area and the action on the central front may be a diversion as part of the southern push rather than a drive for Moscow.

It would be surprising, in view of the huge force the Germans have thrown in the southern drive, that they should not score at least initial success in the first weeks of the drive.

THE RUSSIANS undoubtedly have built defenses in great depth and can always withdraw to prepared positions. Since they have expected the Caucasus drive for months, they have had ample time to make their dispositions.

It was these withdrawal tactics which enabled the Russians to stop the Germans offensive last autumn. When it was stopped, the Russians did not rest, but disclosed unexpected reserves and started a counter-drive that drove the Germans back and regained about one-fifth of the lost Russian territory.

Alexandroff's statement suggests that the Russians have hopes of doing the same thing this time, with Allied aid.

Watching Trends

WASHINGTON—Among all the war-time food shortage stories floating about, one of the most surprising is the one about bananas.

The obvious lead, of course, is to quote that song ballad of some years back: "Yes, We Have No Bananas." Which is now exactly the truth. But I wouldn't have known anything about it if I hadn't gone shopping one day when the dearth of fruit had affected local groceries.

Finally, I got around to, "How about bananas?" The clerk said, "Oh, yes, we have bananas. Here is a delicious one, almost overripe. I can let you have it for 15 cents. The smaller one, slightly green, you can have for a dime."

THAT was the first time I had slipped up on bananas. It was quite a blow. Back in the pre-orange days, my Old Man (he was 18 then) worked the green-apple trick on bananas. He ate two dozen of them on his way home to dinner on the back platform of a Chicago trolley. He was so sick he didn't know where to get off.

So are the banana growers of the Caribbean today.

The story comes from the department of agriculture and the National Geographic society.

In the first place, except for its food value (it is very rich in carbohydrates and minerals), the banana isn't important to war. Its shipping is. The 100-plus ships that have comprised the banana fleet are now doing service elsewhere. The result: Billions of bananas ripening on the trees — "green gold" turning to worthless dry rot—on more than 3,000 acres in the otherwise useless tropical swamps of Jamaica, Mexico, Honduras and Guatemala.

New Orleans, formerly the greatest banana port in the world, isn't a banana port at all any more.

It is hard to conceive of the tragedy this war has brought to the banana growers in Good Neighbor countries to the south.

THE banana is a strange fruit. It doesn't grow on a tree, but on a plant. Its tight, woody leaves form a trunk which shoves the single-stem fruit as high as 30 feet from the ground. It thrives where man suffers most, in the humid, fever-ridden swamps of the tropics. Although brought into this country from Asia 24 years after the arrival of Columbus, it was still a tropical curiosity (single bananas wrapped in tinfoil) at the Philadelphia Centennial in 1876. By 1910, it had become a national staple.

In 1937, the peak year, we imported more than 10,000,000,000 bananas on 66,587,000 stems.

The banana isn't any good if it is allowed to ripen on the tree, which makes it the A-1 fruit for long-distance transportation. Even in the banana country, they are picked green.

NEW YORK—One Minute interview with Billy Rose: "This is certainly a tone-deaf war. Where is the equivalent of all the great songs of World War I—such as Tipperary. There's a Long, Long Trail. Over There? You can't say the boys haven't tried. The song writers have certainly put enough notes down on paper. . . . But, somehow, they don't come off . . . "It's coming along fine. It'll be out in the fall. That Anderson is a good writer."

"Is he going to tell all, Billy?"

Billy thought that over for a moment.

"Well, almost all."

ED WYNN'S newest invention is a racing form which he presents, during "Laugh, Town, Laugh," to Emil Coleman, the orchestra leader, who conducts the pit band.

"I thought you boys'd like this," giggled Wynn, "since you seem so crazy about the horses."

Then Wynn unfolds the form and it turns out to be a pair of paper pants. . . . "So you'll have something to get home in," he explains.

Another of Wynn's new inventions is a collection box for churches that expresses emotion. If you give a quarter, the box chimes a happy little song. But if you throw in a plug nickel a sign unfolds which says "Miser."

A Farmer's Diary

Brood of Quail

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

MANY years ago I read from Henry David Thoreau's journal written at Walden Pond, his account of finding a young newly-hatched quail and holding it in his hand. This little observation impressed me greatly. Scores of times, when, on some ramble, a mother quail flew up, I have looked about for her little ones—sometimes I have even seen them, but never within reach.

Late this afternoon, when I walked beyond our woods to the border of a field of oats, I must have stepped just beside a mother quail with her youngsters close around, for she startled me by the thunder of her rising wings. Involuntarily looking down, I saw motion among some last year's fallen leaves, and as I observed one spot, slowly I discerned the drab form of a little, fluffy chick. I dared not move my eyes from the spot, lest I lose sight of it—but slowly and deliberately reaching down, I took it up in my hand.

It did not struggle, and when I lifted it higher, the baby sat untroubled upon my palm, quite unafraid. The soft touch of that little downy ball of wild life was a sweet and wonderful experience. I stood still lest I tread upon other members of the bevy, which I knew must be about my feet. My pulse beat faster as I stood and waited, keeping close watch of the baby in my hand.

Then I thought I heard the mother make a weird little sound. The one I held rose suddenly, alert and eager, upon soft tiny toes. The motionless leaves and sticks about my feet came suddenly to life, and there were at least a dozen infants like the one I held, all waiting tensely for a second note from their wild mother, hidden in tall grass not far away. My little captive held the same position as those about my feet.

I heard a shy, slow movement in the grass and soon a sleek, striped, feathered head, high and inquiring, called once more. The dozen I had counted rushed toward her, and the one I held beat his feathered wingtips against my fingers and tried frantically to escape.

When he cried out—a muffled, fearsome note—the mother left the rest and came toward me with feathers ruffled until she was twice her size. When I stooped to let the youngster go, she rushed at me and then away with the rescued little one preceding her in the direction of the others.

MOONHOLLOW +++

By Maurice DeKobra and Jessie Ernst
(Copyright, 1942.)

CHAPTER II

Her voice had become more matter of fact, cooler. She was standin gaway from him now, gesturing, talking quickly, with words of little import, as though she had been disturbed—by what? Gordon saw her steal another quick glance at the portrait—then turn away with, "Come along, Gordon; this isn't the only room in Moonhollow—let's go."

Up the gleaming staircase to a broad light hall done in pearl white with bas relief. "This is the door. Your suite." He smiled at her, put an arm below her capable shoulders. "Audrey—I couldn't carry you across a threshold before. Let me do it now." After a momentary protest she was in his arms. He pushed the door with his foot—carried her inside and kissed her gently in the darkness. "Wait, I'll get the lights," she whispered.

"Let it stay dark, I like it more."

But she flashed the lights on to show the new master his bedroom; gold and blue with huge windows glistening beneath draperies. "I hope you like it, Gordon. There may be one or two changes; color, furniture, we'll take care of it." There were rows of leather-bound books. He went closer to them . . . "Decline of the Wests" —"Church vs. State." "The Higher Necromancy." "Securities Exchange Fallacies."

"That's an odd crew," he commented. "Did you buy them for me?"

"No. No. These are Clifford's books. You can put in your own books if you want," she answered. "I didn't choose these." Then quickly, "See this? A radio and phonograph in this cabinet. And here's the control box next to the bed."

She opened one of the countless drawers in the old "bachelor" chest. "And when you want to write another poem—or—essay—come over here." She pulled him to a Sheraton desk inlaid with boxwood and satinwood with six tapering supports in dark mahogany. On it were two Staffordshire pottery figures of the vestal virgins in blue robes, holding urns for oils and wicks. And best of all—an inkstand with four bottles and a double silver tray for the pens. He fingered one lovingly. "George Third. Maybe Thackeray and Browning and Byron wrote with that pen you're holding. A better man couldn't hold it. Clifford got it in a Saville street shop."

"Clifford? Clifford who?"

"Morley. My ex-husband—oh, darling. Of course you wouldn't know. She went on, rapidly explaining how Clifford had an excellent taste for books and bric-a-brac. Gordon asked whether the excellent taste went to the other things. "Why I don't know. What do you think?" She evaded "I hope so for your sake."

"I wonder," mused Gordon, "I wonder whether she is completely indifferent to these things of his? I'm not." And it was that thought that kept gnawing at him through his first night at Moonhollow—a sleepless night—that should have been deep and peaceful because of their love-making before the moon had vanished.

When the sun's rays touched his eyes, he got up, shaved and showered in a crystal and silver bathroom—touching many a monogrammed "C. M." and was about to slip quietly out of the house when he walked in the dark against a taboret, sending it and a vase crashing to the floor. He heard quick footsteps from within and a hard quick voice, "Stop—who's there?" Then the door opened and Oliver hurried to him—a gun gripped in his putty-colored hand, his other hand clutching his robe. "Oh, it's you! I thought it might be a prowler."

Gordon flared. "I got up. Sometimes I work early. Do you mind?"

"No sir—of course not — anything you wish to do . . . Nothing's ready though. You see, Mr. Morley always slept late." Oliver turned with that.

"I'm going for a walk. Mrs. Blake and I will breakfast when she is ready. Do you hear?"

"Yes sir. Madam gave me orders to give you whatever help I can."

With that, he disappeared.

Gordon headed eastward toward the sun that appeared like a burning ship on Long Island Sound. He strolled through the garden. The formal beds were set against a background of natural woodland and along a gentle slope. Beyond, through the arch of wisteria arbor. Gordon saw a vegetable garden. Tall hibiscus hedges served as windbreaks. There were annuals, marigolds and zinnias adding their many hues to the color pattern. Outside the formal garden were more flowers equally well set off with shrubs and evergreens. The dahlias beside the front entrance had grown unusually tall to reach toward the sun on the southeasterly exposure. Nasturtiums trailed from the wall—a trencher table was there, with benches, and four linden trees formed a canopy. Roses climbed from each end of the pergola.

Gordon passed there, thinking, "What a place for the two of us." Then he closed his eyes and listened to the sound singing, "Forever and ever, ever and forever."

From the house came a long melodious, "Halloo there, Gordon." She was breathless when she got to him for a good morning kiss.

"Good to see you up. Air's swell —puts a spike in a fellow."

"I thought I needed it this morning. I never used to bounce out of bed to meet Mr. Sun. But Oliver told me there was a man hanging about the grounds."

"I like to rise early and shine. And I'll keep doing it. Now come along, woman."

She wore a rust-colored dress, with buttoned down pockets—shallow yoke giving her that trim look. She chattered about luncheon. Would it be mushroom caps —crisped sausages—and cubettes!

"For our guests," she explained, "You'll like them. They'll be here later: old friends. I think I ought to give them my strawberry meringue glace."

Gordon walked silently by her side, pleased with the feminine trills as she pointed out her garden. "I love it, Gordon. Look, and it's all ours." Her rock garden was artful with pastel shades except for tiny grace notes of crimson phlox and alyssum blended in a yellow and lavender scheme among mountain and dwarf plants. The garden looked as though created by a stream or glacier. There were rocks of intriguing form with well-rounded edges; stones with moss on them.

Audrey pointed excitedly to left and right, "My perennials, pink cushions, anemones and phlox. Look at that shiny green of those yew trees. See the color of the spectabilis and dogwood? And along that wall and walk, they're evergreen bittersweet and trumpet creeper. They're grand for covering up sore spots. Look!" She held up the creeper. Both followed it to the wall where the creeper had wound about a sundial, half hiding it.

"See how it covers up?" she asked. "You'd almost think the sundial weren't here. It's been covered for months." She lifted the creeper off the dial, adding, "I made this too. Part of it."

"Morley help you?" he asked.

"Yes," she said haltingly. "We made it from sheet lead. This is rectangular, but you can cut it any shape because it doesn't matter where the edge cuts across the hour lines. Main thing is that the shadow caster stands perpendicular to the dial. Look closer."

He did; looked at the hour signs and the inscription; rubbed off mould and read. "Point only to moments of ecstacy for her and for me." He repeated it, added, "That's strange. That's original. Isn't it?"

She nodded her head. "Yes, he wrote well but never for publication.

They left the garden for the stables, Audrey speaking little, Gordon hoping her silence was due only to fatigue of the walk. He attempted to tittiliate her with pleasantries, a memoir, a phrase, swinging his walking stick gaily, telling her about college, and his dreams when he was young and 20, a decade before. He told her of his studies and the sports he liked, swimming, skiing, iceskating. He told her how he got the scar over his eye—at a sit-down strike in a Detroit plant where he'd gone—just before the trip to Sun Valley.

A slavering growl shattered his narrative, and at the turn of the path he saw a wolfhound, brown and white, lean jaws flecked with foam. It stopped then sprang at Gordon.

"Down, Boris, down!" Audrey ordered.

The hound's anger was deep in its throat. Gordon's rough walking stick was raised; he shoved it between the hounds jaws, twisted it quickly. The hound turned on its back, went down. Gordon on top of it, his arm in a steel grip around its throat. A stablehand ran up, quirt and muzzle in hand and ina minute, the dog was bound.

"Sorry Ma'm," fumbled the wiry hand, "'e broke away when he heard you. Can't do nothing with him lately." The perspiring helper pushed the dog between his legs. "He seems to miss Mr. Morley more and more."

"Please be more careful of Boris, Mike," she said. "This is Mr. Blake. I wanted him to see the horses and dogs."

"Yes sir, glad to meet you, sir. I hope you and Mrs. Blake will be very happy." The stablehand touched a stubby forefinger to his checked cap. "Anything I can do for you, sir—call me. As I was saying ma'm. I'll chain Boris good. Maybe he needs a beating with the quirt." the hound cringed. "Like Mr. Morley used to give him. He must have liked it from the way he acts now."

"No, Mike, he's had too much of that."

"Yes, ma'm. you be right there. I always said he was beat too much. I don't believe in it. But if Mr. Morley wanted to deal a strong hand to him—why that was Mr. Morley's business. But it changed his disposition."

"I'm sorry about this, Gordon. Let's hope breakfast can be pleasanter."

It was—coffee steaming from floral china cups, sizzling tidbits from a chafing dish; Audrey smiling across the napery; Oliver unobtrusive.

Later, while changing his clothes, Gordon saw an odd collection of guests arriving. One in a splattered Mercedes, another on a horse, some in roadsters, and a town car. He looked at himself in the mirror and asked, "Why didn't you read that book about winning friends This is where they inspect you."

Downstairs where he met them, they were motley; riding breeches and striped trousers, waist-coats and slacks. Gordon shook hands, passed cigarets and glasses, laughed at dull jokes and prayed. Their reception wasn't chilling, curt perhaps. He tried liking it, thinking that they had been guests before—neighbors of Audrey. The room was talk—loud; chi-chi and chat-chat, nonsensical flimsies, above the piano accompaniment of a long-haired composer plinking out what he hoped to be a surrealistic serenade.

The diaquiris nipped the taste and spurred flagging tongues to talk of the coming hunt, of the past regattas, of hard drinking, fancy riding, nervous people. He heard a dour man in leather trousers tell of Audrey's flying: "She found herself looking down on the clouds from a height of four miles, just touched the record flight for light planes. The motor stalled in a spin and she pulled it out of a stall. She always got 'mike' fright when she had to report to the ground. Remember how Cliff would be waiting there panicked in laughter"

The man turned to Gordon. "Oh, I say, hope you don't mind—old friends, you know. Maybe we'll have the same fun with you."

Gordon turned to his left to hear, under duress, how Audrey and her partner had once raced their stock auxiliary 38-footer and a sporting centerboard sloop. Sports; southern beagle club, Pinehurst polo, Fort Myers regatta, spoon curling in Canada the Sunbeam Dinghy races from Miami . . . echoes from the past life of Audrey — and her former husband.

Non-plussed, Gordon edged into a corner to a bald eagle of a man thumbing a novel. "Fine book here," grunted the man. "It has moral fiber! People losing it these days." Gordon was grateful. Here was his kind of talk, but a hook-nosed female dragged away his new friend with, "Now, Dodie, don't you begin reading. So sorry. Mr. Blake, I really must have him. Or he'll begin the weirdest conversation with you."

They were all pleasant while leaving, too—the bald eagle of a man even clapped Gordon's shoulder. "You come with Audrey sometime; have dinner at my place. I've always liked her, but not him . . ." The man's wife urged him out the door.

Mrs. Morley's new husband bowed and smiled to the last guest, thanked God silently that they were all gone and that he had passed his first test. True, some had eyed him as though he were a new toy of hers. But best of all, they had liked him, and had said they hoped he would like them too.

He told her that at night in her bedroom. She still wore her evening dress after their dinner out; black silk marquisette with a short-sleeved jacket appliqued with lame flowers, striking contrast to the alcove of tuffed silk, the frivolous little powder room, the gold dressing table.

"I want to like them so very much. I'll bet they're fine people," he said, and looked for the answer in her eyes. He lifted her chin, kissed her. Her lips were cool.

It was midnight by the bedside clock when a terrific crash awoke him. He flicked on the light, wrapped his robe around him and rushed downstairs. It had sounded as though someone had stumbled against a table on which was some glass. The living-room was empty. He heard Audrey at the head of the stair, descending. Then he saw what had happened. The picture of Morley had fallen face down; there was a piece of glass vase sticking through the torn canvas.

Gordon was holding it in both hands, surveying the irreparable damages when she came to him and studied the shredded portrait angrily. "Double damn and damn. How could it have happened? The cord had ravelled. Why wasn't it seen and changed? Where's Oliver?" The butler was not there to answer. The house was silent. "It makes me so angry," she snapped, "such a grand portrait of him. I liked it!"

When the sour-faced Oliver appeared, he looked at the damage gloomily and suggested that the kitchen cat might have nibbled on the cord. He propped the picture against the wall, fingering the torn canvas sadly. "An horrible shame, madam, an horrible shame."

"Go back to sleep. Thank you for coming. Nothing can be done now. I'll try to have it fixed in the morning. Good night."

The toast was limp; the cream curdled in his coffee. "Up and out lad," he grumbled, "can't let it get you down. All unimportant, this stuff. Get in a good hike or a ride. And write; she'll be back." And with that he set off past the gardens, past the sundial to the white washed stables—air pungent with hay—of biting with chlorate of lime. The wolf-hound, leashed to a wicket door, barked at him, went back to his dreaming. Mike sauntered out, curry-comb in his fist; doffed his hat. "Fine day comin' sir. Bit thick this morning."

Gordon liked Mike's quizzical smile, his friendliness.

"Be you takin' a look at the lassies now I'd be takin' them out soon for a scrubbin' or a run."

"Thanks, Mike, I think I might like to ride," Gordon answered.

"Fine sir; right this way." He led Gordon into the long stable down an asle faced on each side by stalls. Boots and saddles hung from the walls. Mike took down a crop, put it into Gordon's hand. "You might want to carry that when you ride. Gives a horse direction sometimes. Now over here, Mr. Blake, is Romany Strain out of the Belair stud City Flyer. She is the fastest . . ." His voice went on hurriedly, indistinguishable amid the mellow neighs and snorts of champion fillies and mares.

"Wait, Mike. Who's this?" Gordon asked, stopping at a stall.

Mike turned. They both watched a chestnut gelding: motionless, white spot of forehead, thin heavily veined nostrils.

"This looks more like what I want—a good quiet one. I'm not much of a horseman, Mike. I'll try him."

"Not this one sir. He's standing there quiet like he was a pan of milk and I know he's likely to bust loose like a mustang."

"Can't change my mind. Take him out and saddle him," Gordon ordered.

"I'd rather not, sir!"

"Come along, Mike. You've cautioned me. The rest is up to me. I'll take a chance." Gordon was flicking the crop near the gelding's nostrils. The nostrils stiffened, tensed; the ears came forward; the eyes narrowed. "Oh, you do, by bucko. Well! We'll see." Gordon growled. "Lead him out, Mike."

* * *

Gordon waited outside, pleased that Mike had obeyed, pleased that he could give the orders, pleased that he was tackling a dangerous horse. That always would be the way—override all difficulties he met, ride them down, conquer them.

Bakers Use Honey To Make Up for Lack of Sugar

One reason bakery-made cake maintains its sweetness, despite sugar rationing, is that bakers have long been advocates of a certain percentage of honey in many of their cake and icing recipes.

While honey has also been restricted to big buyers, they were allowed to use the same amounts purchased in 1941; thus bakers have been able to offer delicious honey buns and other made-with-honey products as usual.

A new WPB order now allows bakers a limited additional amount, so there will be more honey-sweetened pies and cakes in the bake-shops. Because bakers usually blend the honey with a certain percentage of sugar, according to the American Institute of Baking, few people realize that this has been one of the fine points of commercial baking for quite some time.

Joint Meeting Is Held by Class

The Golden Rule class of St. Mark's Lutheran church held a joint meeting with the Pastor's Aid society last evening having a covered-dish dinner at John's park. Twenty-eight members and friend attended. Mrs. Marshall Long, president, conducted the business meeting. Devotions were led by Mrs. Mary Cline.

Hostess for the evening were C. A. Portz, Mrs. Carrie Cairns and Mrs. Clarence Boals. Games were played with prizes being awarded to Mrs. Howard Lucas, Mrs. Portz, Mrs. Cairns, and Mrs. Charles Rouse. Another joint meeting with covered-dish dinner will be held August 11.

Here's How You Can Have Star-Spangled Silhouette

By DOROTHY ROE
(Wide World Fashion Editor)

Draw apart and pull yourself together, Mabel That girdle crisis is past.

Your loving Uncle Sam took one look at the new WPB-regulated dresses for fall and realized that if a girl is to fit into that pencil-slim silhouette she must keep the curves under control Thus we still have girdles perhaps not quite so flexible and two-way-stretchy as before, but equipped with ample elastic for comfort and fit

The first wartime foundation garments are just beginning to trickle into the market, as most stores still are stocked with pre-war styles Come fall, however, you'll be seeing the new versions in quantity—and you're going to have to look sharp to tell the difference.

The corsetry designers have done a praiseworthy job in thinking up ways and means to insure your streamlined figure while making the most of every precious inch of elastic

Your new fall girdle or all-in-one will have narrower elastic panels than before You'll find most foundation garments employing non-stretch fabric panels back and front, with elastic gores strategically placed Some have concealed hook-and-eye fastenings instead of zippers, and most have four garters instead of six.

Otherwise they're not too different, and if you are particular about a perfect fit, you'll suffer no girdle hardships, despite the rubber shortage.

Remember this, however Your girdle now has become a possession to be cherished tenderly, so take care of it Try to buy two, so that you can alternate wear. Wash them once a week in lukewarm suds and dry in a cool place. Keep them in A-1 repair, and guard them with your life. That's all, Mabel.

FACTS ON FIGURES: You'll need plenty of curve control to fit into the new L-85 dress styles for fall. Typical of the new silhouette is this slimly fitted frock of sleek rayon crepe, designed to save fabric.

Don't Brood Over Fate, Troubles

By MME. QUI VIVE

Brooding, mulling over one's troubles, recalling the disappointments of the past will do more to wreck a woman's looks than the ravages of time. To cure the ills of the mind and the heart, there is no remedy equal to good hard work.

If you find yourself in a more or less frantic state because of unfavorable turns of the wheels of fate, as we all do at one time or another, don't let your family coddle you. If they say "You must rest, dear," shut you up in a darkened room, rise up and smite them. Their idea of the proper treatment for a jittery patient is offered in all kindness, but it will cause an unhappy, depleted woman to plunge her head into a pillow and weep.

The more a disappointment or grievance is nursed, the greater it becomes. There's many a wrinkled woman who, having outgrown her sorrow, regrets with all her soul that she dramatized it, dwelt upon it, got old and homely through cherishing it. Time is the good old doctor. He heals wounds. Keep busy. Give the old boy a chance and he will wipe the slate clean.

Right now we must all strive for mental health and spiritual strength.

Every waking moment the brain is on the job. Thoughts fly in and out. But the door can be closed against depressing ones, if the mind concentrates upon interesting work, if there is some special destination in sight, some achievement to be won.

Dull, tired-looking women aren't all toilers. Some of them are women who live in hotels because they don't want the care of a home. The children are married and gone. They live in a continual spree of self-pity which, some of them, I am sure, enjoy. It is stupid to live in the past. It dates one. It is the best possible means of getting beyond finger touch with one's youth. It is also a bore.

Women who keep young looking way past middle age are those whose eyes sparkle, who cling to their enthusiasm, who face life with courage, refuse to be floored by circumstances. Everybody has ups and downs. Bad luck is hard to bear, but good luck may come at any moment and chase bad luck away. One might as well believe it anyway. Hope is a nice companion.

Keep working. Be active. Work is not only a stimulant for the mind, but it is good for the body, helps one to keep well.

The war has pulled many a woman out of a ditch into which she threw herself. She has found a job helping in the great cause. It is good for a lot of things that ailed her.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

MY OWN taut nerves relaxed at Katharine's capitulation. I knew that I would have no more trouble with her. When a spirited, mentally alert woman of authority yields to necessity after consulting her own common sense, she always does a thorough job of it, and Katharine proved the truth of the rule after her promise to me.

She obediently ate the light breakfast I had ordered for her, and as meekly swallowed the sedative after I had tucked her snugly of it, and Katherine proved the I had kissed her and opened the window she was fast asleep.

I telephoned Dicky's breakfast order and mine to room service, then tiptoed to the camouflaged door leading to the other suite and knocked lightly upon it.

When Dicky opened the door I spoke in muted voice.

"She's completely under," I said.

"I'll try not to fall over my feet," he whispered back, then gathered up his personal belongings and the bedding he had taken from my suite the night before.

"Please go to the living room," I said. "I'll close the doors after you."

He was stowing away some of the bedding in the closet, and as he closed the closet door he put the low voiced question, "Did you have much trouble with her?"

"Not a bit," I returned. "She protested a little, but—

"Probably too worn out to have much fight left in her, Dicky commented. "I've always contended," he added with a sly grin, "that you've mistaken your career. You should have been a tiger trainer. Witness the state of cowed docility to which you have reduced me!"

"Thank you for telling me," I retorted. "I never would have noticed the change in you otherwise, nor would anyone else."

"Touche!" he murmured. "And now may a thoroughly cowed but famished beast be permitted to whimper timidly, "When do we eat?'"

"Whenever room service pleases," I returned placidly. "I telephoned the order as soon as possible and told them to make all haste."

Appeased By Breakfast.

"Which probably means half an hour, at least," he said with true masculine pessimism when hunger is concerned, but it was less than half that time before the waiter brought in our breakfast trays and Dicky forgot his grievance.

"They may be slow but they sure do you well in this joint," he admitted, and I forbore to tell him the truth—that the service was also prompt.

"Yes, they do," I agreed, then put a question of which I needed the answer for guidance.

"How soon are you going over to the Underwoods?" I asked.

"Immediately after this breakfast and a smoke," he said. "You know what the Chief is. He wants action, and he also wants Lil and Miss Whitlock to get on their way to the farmhouse as soon as possible, especially now that Katharine is here."

"Is he going to send them by train or by motor car?"

"By train, I believe, with a guard. He needs that armored car here."

Rebels at Delay.

I looked at my wrist watch, and remembered my railway time table.

"They can't leave before this afternoon," I said, "and if I know Lillian, she'll want to see Katharine as will Miss Whitlock, and discuss the children's routine with them."

"For the love of Pete!" Dicky exploded. "Miss Whitlock is a capable trained nurse, and Lil knows how to manage Mother like nobody's business. Why should they want to chew the fat before they go?"

"Nevertheless, they will," I told him imperturbably, "and as there will be no holding Katharine once she awakens, I think that to be on the safe side you would better ask Lillian and Miss Whitlock to come over here for luncheon.

"Father can arrange the details of their transportation, but tell him from me that the nerves of both Lillian and Katharine are strung so tightly, we would better all humor their whims as much as we possibly can."

New Ways of Fixing Liver Appetizingly

By BETSY NEWMAN

Don't forget to serve liver frequently. It is a valuable food, especially good for children. Liver and bacon is the quickest way to cook and serve it, but there are many other ways, and I'm giving you a couple of recipes today, with one that uses liver sausage instead of the plain liver.

Today's Menu.

Pork Liver Creole, Baked Liver Patties or Liver Sausage Casserole
Scalloped Potatoes
Mixed Vegetable Salad
Steamed Brown Bread
Butter Hot Drink

Liver Sausage Casserole.

1 lb. liver sausage
1 Tbsp. mustard
1 Tbsp. onion juice
⅛ tsp. paprika
1 c. fine cracker crumbs
1 egg, beaten
¼ c. chopped celery
½ c. grapefruit juice
½ c. cooked green peas

Mash liver sausage with fork, add seasonings and mix well. Combine remaining ingredients and mix with liver sausage mixture. Place in well-greased baking dish and bake in moderate over (375° F.) 25 minutes. Serves 6. Various sausages combine well in casserole dishes, with potatoes, rice, or other vegetables, or with spaghetti, macaroni or noodles. You can invent your own dish if you are a resourceful cook, and will find them economical and appealing.

Pork Liver Creole.

1 lb. sliced pork liver
2 Tbsp. lard or other fat
Flour
2 c. tomatoes
2 Tbsp. chopped onion
Salt and pepper

Wash pork livers in cold water, dry on soft paper. If your butcher has not removed skin and tough fibers, do so with a very sharp knife. It is not necessary to scald pork liver before cooking, but scalded liver is easier to grind or chop. Dip liver in flour, brown in hot lard. Add tomatoes and onion; season to taste, cover and cook slowly for 15 minutes; then uncover and cook 15 minutes longer, until liver is tender and sauce is thickened. Serves 6.

Baked Beef Liver Patties.

1 lb. beef liver
1 c. thick white sauce
¼ c. cooked rice or mashed potatoes
⅛ tsp. paprika
1 tsp. onion juice
⅛ tsp. pepper
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. lemon juice
1 egg
1 c. cooked tomatoes
Butter

Chop or grind liver, combine with white sauce, rice, egg and seasonings. Shape into flat 2-inch patties, put in shallow baking dish, cover with tomatoes, dot with butter and bake in a moderate oven (350° F.) for 30 minutes. Serves 6.

PASTOR MOVES

Author Gives Information About Camps

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Dear Miss Fairfax:

It is my plan to visit my boy friend at his camp this summer. As I have never visited an Army camp, I'm not familiar with procedure, expense, clothes, etc.

Is it true that some camps have a guest house and that reservations must be made in advance? Anything you can tell me will be appreciated.

M.

The Camp about which you write does have a guest house, and a reservation must be made at least two weeks in advance, as there are always many visitors. I suggest you tell your boy friend just what dates you expect to be there, so that he can find out whether space will be available then. He is the one who makes the reservation for you, and he can tell you what the expense will be.

Sports clothes are the best kind to wear that is,: short skirt, sweater and low-heeled shoes. Frilly clothes would be out of place. However, ask your boy friend, if there will be any dances during the time you will be visiting. If there are, I suggest you take along a formal dress. The boys like their girl friends to wear sport clothes, except at dances and evening affairs, when they like to see them in their party clothes.

Hospitalization for Soldier's Wives.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband is in the Army and we are expecting a baby in the fall. I'm wondering if there are hospitals where a soldier's wife may go before the baby arrives and stay a few months afterward. I know there are hospitals for unmarried girls, and I think they should have one for soldiers' wives as $21 a month doesn't go very far.

Soldier's Wife.

As a soldier's wife you are entitled to hospitalization during your confinement. As you do not tell me at what camp your husband is situated, I suggest you go to the nearest Army camp, or have your father or mother do this for you, and find out whether you can receive care there. The Army hospitals are overcrowded at present and if you can make a reservation perhaps they may be able to take care of you when the time comes.

The Commanding Officer is the one who can give you the proper information. If you are not near enough to an army camp, I suggest you go to your Red Cross headquarters.

Wants to Send Gift to Her Soldier.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

If I sent a box of stuff to a very dear friend of mine in the Navy would he really receive it? My package will be addressed care of the postmaster in the city nearest to where he is stationed. Thank you for answering.

The United States mails give the same careful attention to packages as well as letters. Therefore, if you send a package to your soldier friend, care of the Postmaster where you address his mail, he will be sure to receive it in due time. However, it would be a good plan not to send anything perishable, as it may take a long time to reach him.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My wife and I seem to have drifted apart completely since I have joined the Army, and I think a divorce would be as welcome to her as to me. From all accounts she hasn't suffered in silence during my absence, but has had an extremely good time. Do I have to consult my Commanding Officer?"

SOLDIER BILL.

Divorce in the Army is the private business of an enlisted man and his wife. The soldier does not have to consult his Commanding Officer. If his insurance is made out to his wife, and if he does not want her to continue as the beneficiary, he may name some relative.

If he has children he will probably continue to make them an allotment, if he's a good father.

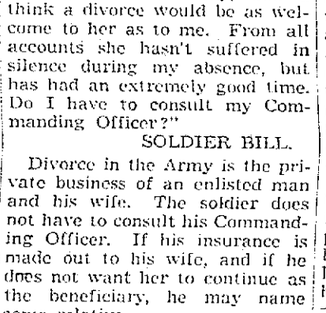
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

HANDS NOT MACHINES

Bridge hands do not play themselves. A declarer who looks over his own and the dummy, and then thinks he can tell you exactly the number of tricks he will take, may be right part of the time. But unless he takes into account the way he is going to play the cards and the way the defenders are going to play theirs, his calculations may be upset out of all proportion to what he considers the maximum or minimum possibilities.



South reckoned that his hand would take six tricks in spades, losing to the A and K, and consequently that his pre-emptive bid would be down four tricks if he found nothing in his partner's hand. If, however, he took one trick there, he would be down only three, a good sacrifice against the probable vulnerable game of the opponents. If his partner could not take any tricks, he reckoned, then the opponents could make a slam, and he would be willing to be set four tricks to prevent it.

After West led the heart 3, and he saw the A in dummy, he figured that this would cut his loss to only down three tricks. He went farther and decided that, if West had led from the K, he could cut the loss to down only two by trying the finesse. So he made the effort. After the K won that, East peeled off three clubs and led a fourth. South ruffed, West overruffed, and the defenders also got two high spades plus the diamond A, for a total of eight tricks, setting the contract five tricks, a total of 900 points.

HOROSCOPE

FOR THURSDAY, JULY 16

A moderately active and successful day is forecast from the prevailing planetary interventions. While there may be advancement, preferment and favors from superiors, employers and those in authority, yet there may be a slight hurt or opposition from an elder. Public, community or fraternal support may be confidently sought, and the social angle is well stimulated for pleasant contacts. This may be particularly effective in domestic, artistic and sentimental relations and functions.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate an active, prosperous and happy year in all their relations and contacts. Superiors and those in power should be gracious and ready to confer benefits or promotion. Public, group and community affiliations are particularly responsive and encouraged, with writings gaining favorable acknowledgement. However the accent is on the social, domestic or romantic associations of life, with probably much merrymaking, parties and celebrations of engagements or marriages. All literary and artistic pursuits should flourish and give gratification.

A child born on this day should have strong social and domestic inclinations, being friendly, sympathetic and hospitable. It may have excellent artistic and intellectual abilities, assuring it a happy and successful career.

Set Hour of Curfew for Youngsters

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.

I wish I might prevail on all parents of children from 5 to 12 to train them to make a bee-line for the house when the street lights appear. Let parents make and enforce this law at home. The police have enough to do.

The average child, the year around, is playing out of doors from one to several hours after dark. Some of these youngsters wander blocks from home. With habits of roving about unprotected and unrestrained while they are young, they are inclined to go farther and farther away and face wider physical and moral dangers as they grow older. Many who are delinquent at 15 would not have been, had they been kept off the streets during their earlier years.

How It Is Done.

Announce to your child that beginning this evening he will come directly into the house the moment the street lights are turned on. Tell him that you will not call him, that he will bring himself in. In case he does not come home promptly, wait for him. Calmly and clearly then repeat the rule, and tell him that if he is late on any other evening hereafter he will be punished. Define the punishment and thereafter prove that your word is dependable.

A reasonable punishment would be for him to have to sit in a chair where he can be seen (so as to get into no further trouble) doing nothing—no books, no funnies, no radio—for exactly one hour. If dinner is ready he must take his punishment first and after that eat his dinner. Let him know he will be punished every time he is late.

Let Child Choose.

But suppose he won't go to the chair or stay there? Let him choose between this and a good spanking he won't forget. I'm for letting a youngster choose but for limiting the choices to only two, as a rule.

Don't begin this training until you or the other parent is sure to be there to enforce the rule to the letter. Then, just as a matter of security, one parent should be on hand for at least a month at this hour. There must be absolutely no exception to the rule.

Q. What moral harm do we do to our growing children when we gossip and repeat ominous rumors about the war, in the home?

A. We undermine their mental health, character and patriotism.

EXPLAINS WHY WHISKY AND GIN HAVE MORE KICK

Science Publication Says Cream of Tartar Slows Wine's Reaction.

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Wide World Science Editor)

NEW YORK—The reason why the alcohol in whisky and gin has a bigger kick for most drinkers than the same amount of alcohol in wine has been found at Stanford University School of Medicine.

Cream of tartar in the wine makes the difference. That chemical slows the passage of alcohol from the stomach to the blood. The kick of drinking comes only after the alcohol reaches the blood and brain.

Whisky and gin alcohol, unimpeded by cream of tartar, piles up more quickly in the blood. Cream of tartar—hydrogen potassium nitrate—is a natural part of grape juice. In wine making most of it comes out, in the form of a precipitate known as argols, which is the principal industrial source of cream of tartar. A trace remains in the wine.

The report is made in Science, official organ of American science, by Doctors Henry Newman and Mason Abramson. They found that Scotch, pure alcohol, Bourbon and gin alcohol were absorbed into the blood two to three times faster than alcohol from port and bergundy.

When a little of the natural wine material was added to the hard drinks, they were slowed down to the wine rate.

However, the Stanford experimentors found also that men differ, because of the way their stomachs act with alcohol. One man just naturally absorbed hard liquor alcohol not a bit faster than wine. His blood took the alcohol from bourbon whisky slower than from either of the wines.

The explanation in his case was that alcohol interfered with the normal movements of his stomach. This effect was so marked that alcohol nauseated him.

Cream of tartar is what chemists call a buffer. It changes acidity. The Stanford physicians drew the kick out of the hard drinks by using an amount of the buffer that would give whisky exactly the same acidity as wine.

Varied Activities Keep Mansfield Girl Scout Campers Busy

Mansfield Girl Scouts are right in the midst of their six-day camping season at Averill's woods, west of the Richland county fairgrounds. One hundred girls, camp capacity, are enrolled for the season and are engaged in all kinds of camp activity including campcrafts, nature study, outdoor cooking, folk dancing and dramatics. In the picture at top left, a group hikes through the woods. They are, left to right, Paula Clever, Barbara Ann Powell, Sara Scott, Patricia Beech, Reba Stoffer, Jo Ann Blackstone, Dolores Bush and Loretta Zediker. Top center, a group makes "sit-upons." They are, left to right, Frances Draffan, Sandra Theaker and Meredith Nail. At top right, Betty LeLaney cuts a stick. At lower left, four girls examine a nature exhibit. They are Jacqueline Augustine, Barbara Bailey, Jacqueline Fonkalsrud and Miss Ellen Percy, counselor. At lower right, some outdoor chefs. They're Marilyn Massa, Margaret Burns, Eileen McBride and Elinor Matthes.

100 Girl Scouts Start Second Half of Day Camping Season

The last half of the summer day camp season for 100 Mansfield Girl Scouts starts tomorrow.

Camp life this year has been a little more rugged than usual for the site in Averill's woods, west of the fairgrounds, demanded some pioneering on the part of the Scouts before it was cleared away enough for the campers to pitch their tents and launch their recreational program.

The Scouts are divided into five separate units, according to age, and each unit carries on its own program under the supervision of two camp counselors. Each unit selected its own type of activity at the outset of the season and the general program includes camp crafts, nature study, various kinds of sports and outdoor cookery as well as folk dancing and dramatics.

Younger Scouts are aided in their program by the more experienced campers particularly in the outdoor cookery that is conducted over a tin can stove "fired" by a lighted candle. The candles were made at the beginning of the season by tightly rolling newspapers in the form of a candle and then boiling these sticks in paraffin.

Camp is held two days a week, Tuesday and Thursday, and the Scouts make the trip to the site by bus, taxi, private car and bicycle. Any transportation difficulties that loomed at the beginning of the season due to tire rationing dissolved when camping grounds were obtained close to the city.

Miss Eleanor Bond, Girl Scout executive, is in charge of the camp program, and she is aided by Mrs. Louis Lamoreux, camp chairman, and the following supervisors: Mrs. Clay Lutz, Mrs. K. E. Buhr, Miss Helen McCauslin, Miss Rosemary Massa, Mrs. Alvin Kreig, Miss Janis Carter, Mrs. F. H. McDowell, Miss Dorothy Gump, Miss Eliena Percy, and Miss Margaret Gage.

THEATERS

Romantic Comedy.

Robert Taylor has the role of a "lease-lend" Romeo in his current co-starring attraction with Norma Shearer at the Ohio. In "Her Cardboard Lover," Taylor portrays a young man who gets nice work by answering a beautiful lady's "Help Wanted" advertisement. Miss Shearer appears as a flirtatious young woman who hires Taylor to ward off the attentions of another man who plays her own game. George Sanders plays the other man.

Screwball Plot.

Fronchot Tone does another broad comedy part in "The Wife Takes a Flyer," current Madison attraction, in which he poses as a complete screwball in order to fool the Gestapo when his plane is forced down in Occupied Holland. He is aided by Joan Bennett as a little Dutch girl whose life is complicated by a pompous Nazi major. Allyn Joslyn, Roger Clark and Cecil Cunningham are in the cast. Julie Bishop, who appeared in "I Was Framed," and Faye Emerson are cast in "Lady Gangster," the second attraction.

Comedy Drama.

The story of a man who finds that running a regular business enterprise was more profitable than cracking safes is unfolded in "Larceny, Inc." Edward G. Robinson's starring vehicle opening Thursday at the Ritz. Robinson has the role of an ex-convict who wants to go straight but plans one last job before doing so. The preliminaries to the job call for "going straight" and Robinson finds it difficult to get back in the old path. Jane Wyman and Broderick Crawford are in the cast. Don "Red" Barry in "The Cyclone Kid," is the co-feature.

Striking Drama.

A ruthless power-made woman pits helself against the peaceful life of a little Southern town of the 1900's in Bette Davis' starring vehicle, "The Little Foxes," opening Thursday at the Park. Based on Lillian Helman's successful stage play by the same name the picture gives Miss Davis the role of "Regina Giddens," whose avarice thwarts the happiness of everyone around her. Herbert Marshal and Teresa Wright top the supporting cast in the respective roles of father and daughter. "Jungle Man" with Larry "Buster" Crabbe is the second attraction.

FASTER PRODUCTION CALLS FOR FASTER SEEING!

In our battle against Time let it be remembered that no man on a lathe or assembly line can work faster than he can see.

So in this crisis, industry is turning to lighting as a potent means of speeding production, and relieving strain on eyes and nerves and bodies. For it is now known that we actually see faster in better light. It has been proved repeatedly that workmen can produce faster—with fewer accidents—and less spoilage—and with definitely less fatigue—when lighting is adequate.

Actual reports from wartime plants show production increases up from 3% to 15% as a direct result of improved lighting.

Does this give you an idea of the value of LIGHT to America today? Isn't it worth while for you to find out what better lighting can do for your business—YOUR HOME? Why not let one of our Lighting Service Specialists survey your lighting tomorrow?

Court Upholds Ban Against Communists

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Miss Midnight's Notebook.

Manhattan Glitter: Norma Shearer and her ski-instructor (What! In this weather!) playing gin rummy in Fefe's Casino — as domestic a couple as Will Hays could want . . . Irene Hervey with her Chocolate Soldier, Allan Jones . . . Al Jolson on bended knee at Leone's. No, not singing Mammy —just tying a shoe lace!

Eric Von Stroheim, the monocle man, donning a pair of horn-rimmed specs, the better to behold Margaret Scott at the Cafe Pierre, my dears. . . . Irving Berlin telling Leo Lindy: "Why don't you have live herring swimming around in your windows?" . . . Lili Damita's slinky black satin gown adding to the heat wave at Cerutti's . . . Judy Garland, before leaving for the coast, lunching with two lads in Anzac uniforms at the Outdoor Promenade cafe.

Fables From the Forties: Mary Anderson, the young star of "Guest of the House," has been secretly married for several weeks to Leonard Behrens, a young writer. She was afraid to let anyone know about the wedding during the run of the show for fear it might affect the public's appreciation of her part as a shrew in the play. But when "Guest in the House" closed, Mary decided to let everyone know she was a bride.

The p. a. was not only surprised, but unbelieving. He didn't even call the newspapers to tell them the story.

So two nights after she "broke the news," Mary, wearing a big wedding ring, and Leonard, accompanied by a galaxy of relatives as additional evidence, sat in Armando's and tried to convince all their friends that rice and old shoes were in order.

The Owl Patrol: Father Knickerbocker has granted the AWVS permission to hold an old-fashioned block party on Swing street July 22. The street will be roped off from 9 p. m. to 2 a. m., and bonds and stamps will be sold by virtually every big star in town. . . . A casualty of the George Jessel-Lois Andrew rift is Walter O'Keefe's wonderful Calypso about them, now hopelessly dated. It was called "It's Very Warm for December and May" . . . Bon Soir, the famous doorman at El Morocco, has been drafted by Uncle Sam. Now when he says "Bon Soir" to you, he ain't kidding . . . Lily Pons is so patriotic these days that she carries her parcels when she goes shopping. Stopping at the Chateaubriand the other night for a supply of foie gr s to take to her Connecticut place, little Lily was so laden down with packages that they had to tie the foie gras around her neck!

A Stone's Throw From Broadway: Huntz Hall, of the Dead End Kids, having a last fling—at Iceland — before he goes into the army . . . The last war's generation may remember Lillian Fitzgerald, the operetta and musical comedy star, who appeared with Caruso and other great singing stars of that era. Lil now is working at the 18 Club, ironically enough in a burlesque of opera with Frankie Hyers and Roy Sedley. She plays the "straight man" for their punch lines and mugging. And she seems to be picking up their style.

The other night as she finished her aria, a middle-aged ringsider accidentally toppled off his chair. "It's been a long time," La Fitzgerald observed with a wink, "since I had them in the aisles!"

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—Another side of Hollywood:

Hedy Lamarr, in dark make-up for her "White Cargo" role, is lunching in the M-G-M restaurant when the telephone rings. Over in the corner, a blue-uniformed boy answers. "Miss Lamarr?" he says. "One moment, please."

Coons

The boy brings the instrument to Hedy, plugging it under the table. He stands by while Hedy talks, then returns the telephone to its corner, awaiting the next call.

His name is Ray Osburn. Telephone service, from noon to 2:30, is but part of his 9 to 5 working day. The rest, with two half-hour rest periods, he gives out information and directions to callers at the studio administration building.

Ray is 18, handsome, a little shy but capable of breaking into a personable, photogenic grin. He is the first subject of these "other side" sketches to admit—reluctantly but frankly—that he sought a studio job because he wants to be an actor.

"I've never admitted it before," he says, "because people would all say, 'So you want to be an actor — ha!' But I do — why not say so? I've wanted to act since I was so high. Came here from Hanford, Calif., after high school dramatics and Visalia Junior college. My family? They think I'm insane and always have," he grinned, "but I believe if you want something badly enough there's no reason why you can't have it. In my job I get to know everybody—of course, they don't know me—but some day it may lead to something."

If Ray expected to be "spotted" by some talent-hunting director—and he says he didn't—he has been disappointed. "The directors are so busy with their own affairs I doubt if they see anybody who isn't right with them," he says.

He is just getting over being sensitive about his position as—practically speaking — a telephone-bearing robot. "I always feel better," he confesses, "when one of them says 'Thank you.'"

Ray makes $23.50 a week, after starting four months ago as a messenger at $18. He shares a lease on an old house in the hills behind Hollywood with Don Otis, Alan Ladd's stand-in.

The boys painted and refurnished the house themselves, are furnishing it and buying a car—settling down for the long siege of Hollywood. Both cook, each shares grocery, rent, cigaret, incidental expenses.

Ray has been to Ciro's (as guest of a friend) and to Earl Carroll's on his own. He likes night clubs, dancing, seeing people. He saw Garbo once; she's at Metro, too.

When he is being a very old man of 18, Ray insists that stars are only "interesting and fascinating—not glamorous" to him. Joan Crawford is his favorite.

But he shops for his movies not by stars, but by stories. He reads serious literary novels, likes to have friends—mostly movie extras—in for talk sessions.

He doesn't know what the next step is for Ray Osburn, future actor, but he's sure his chance will come. Meanwhile he's "inside" a studio and happy about it.

U. S. AGREES TO BUY EXPORTS FROM ICELAND

Contracts For $45,000,000 Worth of Commodities Under Lend-Lease.

(By International News Service)

REYKJAVIK—The United States lend-lease administration has signed contracts for the purchase of an estimated $45,000,000 worth of Icelandic products during the fiscal year 1942-43. This will represent almost all of Iceland's export commodities.

The new commitments were made in addition to a lend-lease fund of $25,000,000 of which approximately $18,000,000 has already been spent. They represent higher prices, "a substantial increase" over previous levels.

Under both the new and old agreements, the bulk of Iceland's fish catch is being sent to England to bolster British food stocks while Uncle Sam foots the bill, paying in measure for the American occupation of this base and conserving full trans-Atlantic shipping for other vital goods.

The contracts for the current year, now awaiting formal ratification in Washington, provide for the purchase of all Iceland's white fish, all of her herring oil, half of her cod oil, 25,000 tons of fish meal and 450,000 sheep-skins, which will be made into flying suits.

The contracts were signed with Icelandic and British food ministry officials by E. Hjalmar Bjornson and Kenneth Lewis, representatives of the agricultural marketing administration acting as purchasing agents for lend-lease.

They were drawn up during a visit of Charles S. Gage, executive of a commercial cod liver oil firm now serving without pay as a government advisor, and A. W. Anderson of the U. S. bureau of fisheries.

The price increases granted to Icelandic fishermen and trawler owners are estimated at 20 per cent and lend-lease officials pointed out that other Icelandic prices have advanced 25 or 30 per cent in the last year.

'NO LIMITS'

Marines to Take All Who Can Qualify, Says Sergeant.

"No Limit" is the new ruling in acceptance of enlistments for the U. S. Marine Corps, according to instructions received Wednesday by Staff Sergeant Richard Cataldo, in charge of the Mansfield substation.

Four Mansfield and Richland county applicants were in the Cleveland headquarters of the "sea-soldier" recruiting service Wednesday, hopeful of acceptance. To date this area has contributed substantially to this and other elements of the nation's armed forces.

Although announcement was made in Cleveland Tuesday that the area quota would be 450 recruits monthly, Sergeant Cataldo was advised later that all eligible applicants between the ages of 17 and 30 will be accepted.

An alleged molester escaped arrest Tuesday night when the mother of a girl complainant refused to prefer charges against a man police apprehended while he was purportedly pursuing two girls.

HEER CANDIDACY GIVEN BACKING

Cuyahoga Organization Votes Support to Columbus Man In Dem Governor Race.

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND — The powerful Cuyahoga Democratic organization today backed the candidacy of Walter F. Heer of Columbus in the party's five-day battle for the gubernatorial nomination in the August primary.

Chairman Ray T. Miller announced last night that the county executive committee approved by a vote of 192 to 14 recommendations of a scanning committee which selected the Franklin county Democratic chieftain and other candidates for endorsement.

Heer supported a recent movement to draft Miller as a candidate, then entered the race when the Cuyahoga county chairman declined to run.

Earlier former Congressman John McSweeney of Wooster asserted in a formal statement at Columbus that he was not the "candidate of any individual or group" in seeking the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

He did not mention ex-Gov. Martin L. Davey's endorsement of former state treasurer Clarence Knisley of Bainbridge but recalled that he previously had told Democratic chairmen he did not believe it "just or proper" for party leaders to endorse a candidate.

Other candidates for the nomination are State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson and Frank Dye of Columbus.

The Miller organization also voted to support George D. Nye of Waverly for the nomination for lieutenant governor; Robert S. Cox of Millersburg for state treasurer; Joseph Allen of Columbus for attorney general; Michael A. Feighan for the 20th district congressional nomination in opposition to Rep. Mart in L. Sweeney, and John Gillespie in the 21st district in opposition to Congressman Robert Crosser.

CHILD BRIDE DONS SHOES TO FACE CHARGE IN FEUD MURDER

(By International News Service)

JASPER, Tenn—Barefooted Lily Parsons, 15-year-old child bride, reluctantly called for a pair of shoes today so she could go to the Marion county courthouse to answer charges of fatally shooting Sollis "Snoop" Redmond, 26, during a liquor feud battle.

Lily, who doesn't like shoes and hasn't worn any for a long time, said she wanted the shoes to show her respect for Squire D. M. Bryant who was to preside at the hearing today.

Held with the child-bride in the county jail in connection with the shooting were her 51-year-old husband, Walter, and her mother-in-law, Mrs. Ellen Parsons.

The shooting occurred at a bridge over a creek last Saturday and climaxed a battle between the Parsons and Redmond clans in which many shots were fired. The child-bride's shot was the lone effective bullet.

Members of both families, armed with shotguns and rifles, gathered at the general store near the bridge when Lily accused Redmond of hi-jacking 50-gallons of moonshine whisky she and her husband had "stilled."

"'Snoop' hi-jacked the liquor we'd stilled," Lily said. "I told him he shouldn't have done it.' He took after Walter with a hawk blade knife. I ran for Walter's mother, and she came with a shotgun. Then a lot of relatives came.

"A friend of 'Snoops' fired at me but I ducked. Then Walter's mother handed me the shotgun. She'd taken the shells out but she gave them to me. I put them in the gun and waited. 'Snoop' slapped my face. I killed him."

CO-OP PICNICS

100 Attend Outing and Honor Member in Armed Service.

One hundred persons attended the annual family picnic of the Cooperative club last evening at Maple Lake park. George Mason of Kansas City, Mo., international secretary of Cooperative International was a surprise guest and offered a few remarks during a brief program session.

The club honored Robert Kuhn, a member now in the armed forces on furlough, with a remembrance. Ralph Lewis, who is leaving Mansfield for a new position in Newark, and Dr. Ralph Wharton, who will soon enter the service, also spoke.

Tennis, croquet, horseshoes and shuffle board contests were diversions before and after the picnic dinner.

HIRES TEACHERS

Union Rural Board Fills Three Faculty Vacancies.

The Union Rural board of education had employed three teachers today to fill vacancies in the staff of the Weller township schools.

Miss Dorothy Klohs, 136 Parkwood boulevard, was employed to teach home economics in the high school. Hired as elementary teachers were Mrs. Louise H. Adams, Mansfield, and Mrs. Ruth Sharpless, Greenwich.

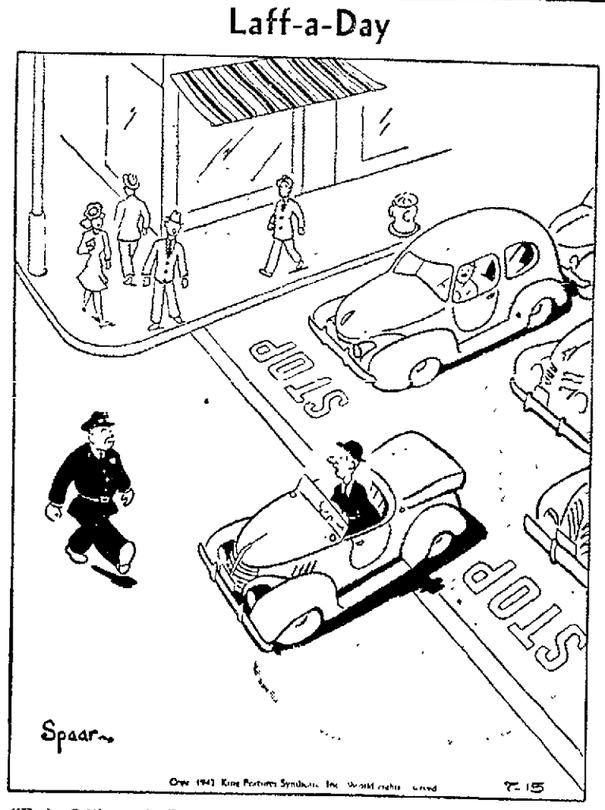
CAMP DATE SET

Salvation Army to Hold Two-Week Indoor Session.

Mansfield Salvation Army will open its annual two-week indoor camping program for boys and girls unable to attend out of town camps July 27.

Enrollment the first week will be limited to boys and the second week to girls, Adjt. Paul Hoffman said. Indoor activities will be held at the citadel five days a week and these will be supplemented by several hiking and swimming parties. Registration is open to boys and girls from six to 14 years of age.

Laff-a-Day



"But, Officer, if I back up, I won't have quite enough gas to get home!"

Mansfield women taking part in civilian defense courses won't be able to get bicycles to go to and from classes unless they are gainfully employed otherwise. James Bailey, rationing clerk, announced yesterday that women in Red Cross or nurses' aid courses would not be eligible for a rationed bicycle unless they received pay for their services. "But walking is good exercise," said Bailey. "It helps the figure and the tire situation at the same time."

The Mansfield postoffice has a headache caused by the delay in obtaining a new flag pole due to wartime priorities but that wouldn't be so bad if local patriots didn't always remind the branch office that "there's no flag out today" everytime the wind blows down the makeshift flag holder attached to an upper story window. It has been almost nine months since the contract was let for a new 60-foot steel flag pole but the implements of war come first and the postoffice has not been able to replace the staff struck by lightning last summer.

The combination of war time, long summer days, and the harvest season is making it difficult for County Agent George B. Gansyard to schedule any night meetings for farmers, so he has decided to stop trying until the wheat is harvested. Farmers are able to work in the fields now until after 9 o'clock and by the time they finish their chores around the barn, it's bed time, the county agent explained. Besides, when farmers are busy with harvesting or planting, they won't take time out to go to meetings.

Detective Lee Remy is a firm believer in logic but he doesn't hold with "implied powers." Remy's latest brush with "implied powers" was today when he arrested a Mansfield resident on a charge of falsely representing himself as a doctor. "But my brother is a doctor," said the accused man. "My brother is an electrician," Remy answered. "but that doesn't make me an electrician."

O. K.'S RULING KEEPING PARTY OFF BALLOT

Unanimous Decision Cites Failure to File Appeal Within 10 Days.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS — The Ohio supreme court today upheld a ruling of Secretary of State John E. Sweeney barring the Communist party from placing its candidates on the state ballot this year. The court denied the party's appeal from the ruling on procedural grounds.

The court held that the party was not entitled to an appeal because it had not followed legal procedure in seeking a review of Sweeney's ruling. The only notice of appeal filed was not filed within the 10-day statutory period, the court ruled.

The court's decision was unanimous among the six judges who voted. Judge Gilbert Bettman did not participate.

The decision, handed down just four days after the case was argued before the court, will in effect bar the Communist party from the November ballot unless the party appeals its case to the U. S. supreme court.

Sweeney, acting under the authority of a new state law, ruled early in June that the Communist and Socialist-Labor parties which he found advocated overthrow of the government should not be allowed to appear on the Ohio ballot.

Mrs. Yetta Land of Cleveland, state Communist party chairman, contended the party had complied "in substance" with statutory appeal requirements when it filed notice of appeal with Attorney General Thomas J. Herbert, Sweeney's legal representative.

The court, refusing to hear the party's appeal, held that notice of appeal should have been filed directly with the secretary of state in accordance with the act.

The party claimed Sweeney violated both the state and federal constitutions when he made his ruling without holding a public hearing.

The secretary of state's action was taken under authority of an America Legion-sponsored bill, passed by the last legislature, to bar from the ballot parties which advocate violent overthrow of either the federal or state government.

In arguments before the supreme court last week Communist party spokesmen declared that their party "definitely does not" advocate violent overthrow of the American government.

"Even if a major party advocated force or violence against the government the law wouldn't rule it out," Mrs. Land told the court.

The court, in its decision, did not rule on the question of whether the act was discriminatory.

Ex-President of Argentina, Friend Of U. S., Succumbs

BUENOS AIRES — (INS) — Dr. Roberto M. Ortiz, former president of Argentina, died today after a long illness. Ortiz only a few days ago relinquished the presidency and was succeeded by acting president Ramon S. Castillo. Ortiz had been in retirement, unable to fulfill his presidential duties, for almost two years.

His illness had long been a major factor in Latin American policies as regards the war.

Ortiz was a staunch proponent of the United Nations cause. It is generally believed that had he been able to carry out his duties as chief executive, Argentina would have joined the United Nations in war against the Axis or at least severed diplomatic relations with Germany, Italy and Japan.

Castillo, who served as acting president and who recently succeeded Ortiz, was always determined to preserve Argentine neutrality because of his country's overseas trade relations with the Axis.

INJUNCTION DENIED

COLUMBUS —(U.P.)— The Ohio supreme court today denied an injunction to George N. Vollmer, Lorain county taxpayer who had sought to prevent the village of Amherst from using $80,000 in revenue from the sale of bonds for construction of a municipal generating plant.

The boys out at Coolridge are still talking about the sparkling round turned in Sunday by Ray Malaska and Frank Jocha, as Ray toured the layout in 32-37—69, and Jocha wheeled around in 35-33—68.

Now they're trying to check the records to discover if Malaska's 32 is a record for the course at its present yardage of 3,020.

Official record for the course is still the 30 blasted out by Nick Loris on Sept. 4, 1938, and the 18-hole record is the 30-35—65 scored by Loris on the same occasion.

But the Loris record was established, according to Coolridge Manager Fred Huntsman, before the three par-3's were lengthened by approximately 50 yards, and when it was possible to reach the three short greens with an iron off the tees.

Very few golfers make a habit now of getting on the short greens at Coolridge with woods, irons or carrier pigeon, and most of the Coolridge swingers use woods off the tees on all three short holes.

So it's possible Malaska set a record for the present course when he fired that 32. Huntsman would be interested in hearing from anyone who has definite information on the subject.

* * *

"What really tickled me," says Huntsman, "was the fact that Jim Musille went along with Ray and Frank and took a golf lesson."

You see, Huntsman and Musille rank as the hottest golf course "barbers" at Coolridge, and when they start riding each other, it's really something to hear.

Musille surprised one and all when he defeated Joe Mayer in the Stroh's Beer-Coolridge match early in the season, and since then there's been little holding him until Malaska and Jocha took him to town.

Fred Huntsman, jr., has enlisted in a naval reserve electrical school after trying for months to get in the navy air corps.

He had passed all the examinations necessary for the air service, but when it came time for induction they told him in Columbus: "Go home and put on 16 pounds, Sonny Boy, you're not big enough yet for a navy plane."

* * *

"Sixteen pounds!" gasped Fred junior. "That would take me years. What else have you got?"

Travelers Go In 3 Contests

Open Home Twilight Season Friday Night.

Mansfield Travelers have a busy week-end of baseball booked ahead of them.

Friday evening at the Fairground they'll open their home twilight season against the Galion Jaycees of the Ohio State semi-pro league, the game starting at 7 o'clock.

Red Hamman, manager of the Travelers, reported today that the team is doing a good job of selling tickets in advance, at very moderate prices, and it appears there will be a crowd on hand for the opener.

* * *

Last week wet grounds prevented a game being played on Friday evening. Bill Martin will be on the hill against the Galion club.

Saturday afternoon the Travelers go out to Ohio State Reformatory where Pet Patterson hurler of a no-hit no-run game last Sunday against the Buckeye Engineers, will be the pitcher.

Sunday will find the Mansfield club going to Mt. Vernon to meet the strong Shellmar Products club, and taking Bob Winbigler along for mound duty.

* * *

For the game here Friday evening, Darby Yarman will umpire behind the plate and Clarence Herrick on the paths.

Charles Scores K.O. In Two Minutes

CINCINNATI — (AP) — Ezzard Charles, flashy Cincinnati fighter, collected $1,000 for two minutes and 46 seconds of lethal punching last night but his victim, Steve Mamakos of Washington, D. C., got an additional $250.

Mamakos, whose purse was fatter because he went 14 and 15 rounds in bouts with Tony Zale last year, ran into a choppy right

Better Be Lucky Than Just Good

Starr Loses on 3 Hits. Olsen Has Shutout on 11.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

THE secret of successful pitching sometimes seems to be luck as much as skill.

Ray Starr, the lean spellbinder of the Cincinnati Reds, pitched three-hit ball yesterday and was beaten 2-1 by the pitiful Phils because two outfielders collided under a fly hit by Pitcher Frank (Rube) Melton and the ball fell for a home run.

On the other hand, Vern Olsen, the Chicago Cubs' southpaw, was pummeled for 11 hits by the New York Giants and not only escaped with his sixth straight victory but scored a shutout, 3-0!

Starr's misfortune cost him his fifth defeat against a dozen victories and cost Cincinnati a full game's distance against the Brooklyn Dodgers and St. Louis Cardinals, both of whom won.

At St. Louis Mort Cooper had luck of a different sort. He was batted out of the box for the third time in succession, but the Cardinals rallied spectacularly to beat the Boston Braves, 7-5, in 11 innings and wipe out what would have been Cooper's fifth setback.

A two-run homer by George Kurowski tied the score in the eighth and another two-run circuit clout by Stan Musial settled the affair.

Brooklyn punished the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-1 with Whitlow Wyatt pitching three-hit ball for his tenth triumph of the year in a night game that drew 21,254 fans at Pittsburgh.

* *

In the American league, the New York Yankees downed the Detroit Tigers 3-0 on the two-hit hurling of Rookie Hank Borowy and extended their first place margin to six games as the Boston Red Sox absorbed another beating by the St. Louis Browns, 3-2.

Whirly Makes Record Bid

Goes Today at Suffolk Downs For Rich Purse.

BOSTON — (AP) — Whirlaway may give the horse laugh to the so-wealthy Seabiscuit if he can change his stride and break near the top today in the $50,000-added Massachusetts handicap at Suffolk Downs.

* * *

The four-year-old son of the English derby- winning Blenheim II needs only $27,244 to equal the record earnings of $137,730 that Seabiscuit piled up during his six years of campaigning.

And he can get it today if he can outfoot seven rivals, of apparently much earlier "Lick," to the wire for the $14,850 winner's share of the richest purse of the current season for handicap horses.

The long-tailed Whirly, owned by the wealthy Warren Wright, the Kentucky and Chicago horse-breeder, happens to be a stretch runner of great fame. But all the previous Massachusetts'—seven in all—have been gained by thoroughbreds that possessed the ability of breaking fast from the box and maintaining their advantage to the wire.

Whirly is going to tangle with some real speed. Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons has Apache, latest challenger to three-year-old honors, Right and Ready. Then, too, Whirly is packing top weight of 130 pounds, and Sunny Jim's baby is lugging only 107.

* * *

If Apache does not crowd Whirly, it could be Mrs. Parker Corning's Attention, or likely, Emerson Woodward's New England favorite, Rounders, and then owned by Texan John L. Sullivan, again there is a slight chance that the early-breaking Transfigure, owned by Texan John L. Sullivan, may last and burst home to take

League Plays Close Games

Ideals Score 10 in One Inning, Lose Decision.

Dominion Electric barely edged Ideal Electric 11 to 13 last evening in a city league softball game. Ohio Public Service nosed out Teaco 11 to 9, and Barnes Manufacturing took the best game of the day in a 3-2 victory over Mansfield Tires.

The O. P. S.-Teaco game was a slugging duel with Krupp getting a home run, Mowery, Fleckenzier and Harner triples, Zeides two doubles, and Steinhour and Leiter one each.

Ideal's defeat came in spite of 10 runs scored in one inning.

Here's Dope On Stars Of Toledo Softball Champs

The Toledo Old Dutch Beers, defending Ohio state softball champions, who won their title last year under the name of the Toledo Page Dairies, and who meet the Mansfield All-State at Liberty park Sunday afternoon at 2:30, boast an array of stars in their lineup.

Here's an individual description of the Beers, as drawn up by the Old Dutch publicity department:

William Ryan, pitcher, a new member of the club this year; has an impressive record thus far; owns a variety of pitches, including speed, rise and sinker; has won five games, lost none, allowed an average of three hits per game, fanned 69.

* * *

Frank Kostyou, pitcher, called "Smoke" by his teammates; veteran of the club; pitches left handed, using windmill style of delivery peculiarly his own, has deceptive slow ball; won 11, lost 1, allowed seven walks in 105 innings.

* * *

Lanny Demboski, pitcher, nicknamed "Punk;" only 19, he's in third year with the champs; ace of squad, winning 14, losing 1, strikeout average of 17 per game.

Tommy Shanders, fielder; six feet, one inch, with powerful shoulders; has .298 batting average, leads team in home runs.

Walter Smolinski, fielder; knows how to play tricky hits to right; has fine throwing arm; tall, well-built man; hitting .293.

Lefty Bayok, short fielder; throws left handed, switch hitter; regarded as one of best place hitters in softball; played with 1935 Crimson Coach world champions.

Mike Murzinski, fielder; throws and bats right handed; best fielder on club; his double in ninth won state championship last year; voted most valuable player in 1941 state tournament.

John Monoky, third baseman, nicknamed "Tarzan;" sinewy built, hits long ball, has strong throwing arm; handled 51 chances with only two errors this season.

Dick Strugarek, first baseman; bats and throws right handed; team captain and chatterbox of infield, flashy, colorful; led team at bat last year with .347 average; several big league ball clubs reported bidding for his services when he finishes school.

John Kurdys, second baseman, nicknamed "Criss;" backbone of the infield; in 46 double plays last season; smooth, easy playing, covers lot of ground; member of 1935 Crimson Coaches world champions.

Orville Swantek, shortstop, nicknamed "Hooks;" hits longest ball on the club; hit 22 home runs last season; smooth, cool and steady afield.

* * *

Tony Smolinski, third base man; his teammates consider him best third baseman in state of Ohio; uses uncanny judgment on hitters; sometimes handles bunts on first base side of infield; has deadly throwing arm; batting average .269.

* * *

Ted Hill, catcher; was All-American catcher with Crimson coaches in 1935; hit 26 home runs last season.

Gene Oleszak, catcher; fiery, hard working, able handler of pitchers, has as good a throwing arm as ever seen in Toledo softball; led the team in extra base hits last season.

Robby Robinson, utility infielder; first year in big time softball; fastest man on team, aggressive fielder.

Dean Picked To Face Yanks

Boudreau Set To Shoot Works Against New York.

NEW YORK — (AP) — Manager Lou Boudreau left no doubt in the minds of his listeners that he intends to shoot the works against the New York Yankees, hosts to the Cleveland Indians in a three game series opening today.

Although the boy manager declined to get out on a limb, he said nothing short of a pair of victories in the series would satisfy him. To start the ball rolling in the right direction he picked a Yankee puzzler, Chubby Dean, for the initial assignment.

* * *

"Dean is my choice to open the series," Boudreau said. "My selection of pitchers for the next two games will depend on the outcome of the opener. I may start Mel Harder and Al Smith, or give Jim Bagby a chance in one of the games. Bagby looked good against Washington last Sunday."

Dean has beaten the Yanks twice this year.

Toledo's Streak Ended at Eight

(By Associated Press)

The winning spree of the once lowly Toledo Mud Hens was at an end today, temporarily at least, but they had sixth place to show for their recent string of successes in the American association.

The Mud Hen victory streak reached eight in the first game of a double header against Columbus last night. It stopped there when Preacher Roe pitched Columbus to victory in the second game, 4 to 3. The Hens took the opener 1 to 0 with Fritz Ostermueller outpitching Frank Grabler of the Red Birds.

Toledo was able to slip into sixth place, a single point ahead of Louisville, when the Colonels suffered their fifth straight reverse, to Indianapolis, 6 to 1.

* * *

Columbus maintained its half-game hold on second place when challenging Milwaukee lost to first place Kansas City, 6 to 4, after winning the first game of a double header, 3 ot 2. In the other game, Owen Scheetz turned in a five-hit performance as Minneapolis trimmed St. Paul, 5 to 1.

LAST NIGHT'S FIGHTS

CINCINNATI—Ezzard Charles (163½), Cincinnati, knocked out Steve Mamakos (162½), Washington D. C. (11).

NEW YORK—Tami Mauriello (195), New York outpointed Tony Musto, (206½, Chicago (8).

SENATORS BOOST MID-ATLANTIC LEAD

SPRINGFIELD — (AP) —Charleton stretched its mid-Atlantic league lead to four games last night, edging Springfield 2 to 1 as Canton crushed second-place Erie 11-2.

Dayton defeated Zanesville 5 to 2. Duck Pitcher Jack Franklin allowed 11 hits, but struck out 10 men.

Stranahan Shoots Medal

Already Qualified But Plays Course Anyhow.

CINCINNATI—(AP)—As 64 golfers today began the first of four daily 36-hole rounds of match play to determine Ohio's amateur golf king, it looked as though a certain broad-shouldered Irishman from Toledo, one Frankie Stranahan, intended to keep right on wearing the crown.

* * *

The 19-year-old former Arizona state champion, after some indecision, took to Maketewah's soggy fairways yesterday and showed 102 entrants the way over the 18-hole qualifying round with a medal score of par 72.

* * *

Perhaps the late entry of Maurice McCarthy of Cincinnati, three-time amateur champion, had something to do with Stranahan's reconsidered decision to play the course, for he was exempted from qualifying.

McCarthy lost to Stranahan in two play-off holes at Toledo in last year's amateur, and today's pairings were so scheduled that if the two meet again this year it will be in the finals.

Playing with Stranahan and Tony Ruddy of Toledo, McCarthy shot a 74 in the qualifier, tying Paul Schutte, another Cincinnatian. Walter Bialy of Akron and Erv Baumgartner of Cincinnati tied for runner-up medal honors with 73's.

Eight 83-shooters fought it out through four extra holes for the last five qualifying places; and Cliff Sweeney of Middletown, Dave Moes of Lima, Tom Whiteway of Cleveland and Tom Davies and Fred Vonderahe of Cincinnati won.

Pairings for today's opening 36 holes of match play with qualifying scores and home cities of non-local golfers included:

Erv Baumgartner (73) and Tom Cloran of East Liverpool (79).

Dutch Reid of Chillicothe (78) and Bob Braun (82).

Emmitt Milholland of Columbus (78) and Dave Moes of Lima (83).

Maurice J. McCarthy, jr. (74) and J. L. Turney of Middletown (79).

Bob Campbell of Granville (78) and Cliff Sweeney of Middletown (83).

Bill McCabe of Middletown (77) and Dick Rhyan of Columbus (81).

Providents Play At Home Sunday

Provident Loan girls, cancelled out of a road trip Sunday, will meet Cuyahoga Falls in a home game at North Lake park instead.

"But we'll not interfere in any way with that Mansfield All Star-Toledo Old Dutch Beers game out at Liberty park," Manager F. L. "Doc" Daugherty declared.

"Their game is scheduled for 2:30, so we'll wait until 4 o'clock for our game. By that time the Liberty park game should be over."

This evening the Providents go to Oberlin.

Stretch Drive Wins First Match for Thelma Linster

Mansfield's Thelma Linster, twice state public links women's golf champion, turned on the heat in the home stretch yesterday at Columbus Country club to defeat Mrs. Edwin Reese of Cincinnati 4 and 2 in the first round of the Ohio Women's Amateur championships, and remain in the running for the state title.

She won five out of the last six holes to decide the match on the 16th green, but apparently it took a wild eight on No. 10 to start her on the victory road.

* * *

Thelma was two down with a pair of 6's starting the match, while Mrs. Reese had a pair of fives. The Mansfielder took the third with a 5, and they halved the fourth in fives. Mrs. Linster evened the match with another five on the fifth, but a five on the sixth wasn't good enough and she went one down again.

But she came back with a 3 on the 7th, took a 6 on No. 8 to go one up, and they halved the ninth, leaving Thelma 1 up at the turn with a medal of 46 to Mrs. Reese's 47.

Then came that disastrous No. 10 and the eight strokes which evened the match again. From there on, Thelma took charge, winning the 11th and 12th with a pair of fives, losing the 13th on a par 3, and then running out the string with three 5's, all of them winning holes.

Their cards:

Linster	665	555	365	—46
Reese	556	564	475	—47
Linster	855	355	5
Reese	666	266	6

Today Mrs. Linster meets Carol Lee Sherrets of Coshocton who scored a 4 and 3 victory yesterday over Mrs. Francis Thomas of Columbus.

Miss Neoma Copic of Toledo, defending laurels she won a year ago, remained the No. 1 favorite after winning the qualifying medal and then shooting 12 holes in even par yesterday for a 7 to 6 victory over Claire Doran of Cleveland.

Still in the fight were such stars as Mrs. James Platt of Dayton, the state's medal play champion; Miss Janet Shock of Dayton, winner of the state title in 1938 and 1940, and Mrs. P. J. (Thelma) Linster of Mansfield, Ohio public links champion in 1940 and 1941. Miss Copic took the "pay as you play" laurels in 1939.

Today's 18-hole matches pitted Miss Copic against Darol Diringer of Tiffin; Peggy Kirk of Findlay against Mrs. Edwin Tasker of Toledo; Mrs. Platt against Miss Shock, and Mrs. Linster against Carol Lee Sherrets of Coshocton.

In the first round Miss Diringer won 6 and 4 over Betty Lee Doren of Dayton; Miss Kirk triumphed 3 and 1 over Dolly Schildmiller, four-time champion of Cincinnati; Mrs. Tasker eliminated Marjory Wendel of Dayton, 4 and 2; Mrs. Platt took a one-up decision over Mary Ann ...erron of Akron; Miss Shock defeated Mrs. Theda Hill of Akron, 2 up.

Mrs. S. B. Kent of Cincinnati, secretary of the Women's Ohio Golf association, said Thursday's semi-finals probably would be held in the afternoon, instead of the morning, to afford the consolation flight entrants a chance to see some of the title play.

The tournament ends Friday, when the 36-hole finals are slated.

NAVY REVEALS AMBUSH LED TO JAP SLAUGHTER

Aircraft, Planes Pounced on Invading Armada, Sinking 20 Enemy Ships.

May 4-May 8, the navy said, the high command decided the enemy's next thrust would be directed against some other section of America's Pacific defenses—Hawaii, Alaska, the Panama canal or the Pacific coast.

Consequently U. S. naval forces were deployed along the 1,700-mile front between Midway island and the Aleutians in the North Pacific. Throughout the danger area, bases were reinforced with long-range, land-based aircraft Thus, the navy made clear, the fighting forces under supreme command of Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific fleet chief, were ready when the blow fell

This was further borne out in a supplementary account which said that "the full fury of the U S. naval task force lying in ambush off Midway was poised to strike—once the quarry was overtaken."

The following account of the battle is taken from the navy communique and supplementary reports based on voluminous communications from commanders in the field.

ENEMY SIGHTED—At 9 a. m., Midway time, June 3, navy patrol planes found an enemy cruiser and transport force in five huge columns about 700 miles west of Midway, coming in.

Simultaneously, a Japanese battle force of carriers and battleships was coming in from the northwest Army fortress bombers and navy patrol planes damaged a cruiser, a transport and probably sank and damaged other vessels in an immediate attack.

BATTLE JOINED—Army and marine planes from Midway attacked main battle force early next day. Four army planes attacked two carriers and probably made a torpedo hit on one. Two of the four planes were lost. Six marine planes attacked and probably got one torpedo hit on an enemy ship. Five of these planes were lost.

Sixteen marine dive bombers got three hits on a carrier, probably the Soryu. Only half of those planes returned. Eleven marine dive bombers reported two hits on a battlesnip. Sixteen army heavy bombers made three hits on carriers in high level attacks.

Meanwhile, at 6.35 a. m., soon after the American bombers had left, Midway was attacked by Japanese carrier-based bombers. Outnumbered marine fighters and anti-aircraft guns shot down 40 enemy planes.

Damage to shore installations was serious but not disabling.

THE ENEMY TURNS—By mid-morning the enemy had suffered only about 10 ships damaged, and the American command expected continued attack. But the Japanese changed course unobserved and both forces began to retire.

American carriers in ambush were rushing full steam to attack. But because the enemy had changed course contact was not established immediately. Some American planes hunted so long they landed at sea.

However, Waldron and Lieutenant Commander Clarence Wade McClusky of Buffalo, N. Y., discovered what the enemy had done and led attacks on the Japanese against heavy resistance. Waldron's squadron scored several hits and shot down some Japanese fighters before it was wiped out. Then American carrier planes arrived in force. The navy described the ensuing fight as "such an aerial circus as never before had been witnessed so far at sea."

As a result of the ambush the Japanese carriers, Kaga, Akagi and Soryu were severely damaged and set afire. Two battleships were hit, one of them left burning fiercely, and one destroyer was believed sunk.

AMBUSH DISCOVERED—By this time the enemy had learned of the American naval force which included at least three carriers. Planes from the then undamaged carrier Hiryu attacked the Yorktown and her escort. Four bombers out of 18 made three hits on the American ship. The rest were destroyed. A torpedo plane attacked followed and although all 12 to 15 planes in this wave were shot down, they put the Yorktown out of action. Her aircraft then began operating from the other American carriers.

Meanwhile the Yorktown's planes had found the Hiryu, hit her repeatedly and left her blazing from stem to stern. She sank the next day. Moreover, two enemy battleships were pounded heavily by these American planes and a heavy cruiser was severely damaged.

About the same time, a U. S. submarine put three torpedoes into the smoking Soryu, which later exploded and finally sank that night. At sunset army bombers scored three hits on the damaged Akagi, one hit on an unidentified large ship, one hit on a cruiser which was left burning, and one or more on a destroyer which was believed sunk.

The Kaga and the Akagi and the Soryu sank during the night.

United States forces had won mastery of the air about Midway.

THE CHASE—Despite unfavorable flying weather to the northwest, where the remnants of the crippled enemy force were retiring, fortress bombers made contact and hit a damaged cruiser early on June 5. Another army bomber force hit a heavy cruiser. About noon, marine corps aircraft also scored a cruiser hit.

Army heavy bombers scored three direct hits on a heavy cruiser. One of these planes was lost and a second was forced down about 15 miles off the islands. All but one member of the crew were rescued Meanwhile, carrier planes were seeking the enemy in unfavorable weather. The carriers themselves were steaming in full pursuit.

On June 6, carrier aircraft picked up two groups of enemy vessels, including cruisers and destroyers. The cruisers Mikuma and Mogami suffered two bomb hits each and a destroyer was sunk. The Mikuma was sunk that afternoon and the Mogami went down later. Another enemy cruiser and a destroyer were hit.

It was in this action that the destroyer Hammann was sunk—the victim of a submarine torpedo.

After June 6 repeated attempts were made to find the fleeing enemy but without success. It was in one of these searches on June 9 that Major General Clarence L. Tinker of the army airforce was forced down at sea and lost while leading a group of long-range army medium bombers.

Draws Fine for Illegal Practice Of Medical 'Skill'

Although declaring he did not accept fees for his services W. T. Alexander, 270 North Main street, was fined $200 and costs in municipal court Tuesday, on the charge of practicing medicine without a state license. Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch suspended $175 of the fine, directing Alexander to discontinue his practice.

Alexander was arrested Tuesday night by Detective Lee Remy and Patrolman Howard Shuck following an investigation by Frank A. Dorsey, Ohio medical inspector of Columbus.

A quantity of drugs, a medical instrument and an account book revealing purported fees for "shots" were confiscated.

Alexander told the court that due to physical disability he was unable to otherwise earn a livelihood, explaining he considered himself operating within the law by not exacting charges.

craft carrier, the Yorktown, was put out of action, and the destroyer Hammann was sunk.

In the theaters of active war in the Far Pacific, the MacArthur headquarters in Australia reported a new bomb raid yesterday on the Japanese airport at Salamaua, New Guinea, and the Chinese acknowledged that the Japanese had captured Wenchow, an important port of southern Chekiang province.

The Chinese, thus confirming a Japanese announcement of last Saturday, said the attackers were impelled by fear that the port would become an Allied air or naval base.

The spokesman pledged that the Chinese would intensify their counter-attacks, and thus prevent transfer of any Japanese forces from China to other areas.

The main Japanese offensive now has cut a swath down across Chekiang from Hangchow to the sea at Wenchow and another from Hankchow south and southwestward in a junction with Japanese troops in adjacent Kiangsi province.

It's the same with the Colonel, too...

To PRIVATE WILLIE GILLIS, JR., who hasn't issued a command (yet) and who is very good at peeling apples, the Home Town Newspaper is a welcome package, indeed.

Willie's Colonel, who hasn't peeled apples for a long time (if ever) and who is very good at issuing commands, comes from another town. But it's just as hard for him to get along without the news . . . especially the news from home.

It's the same with the Captains and the Majors and the Generals. And with Ensigns and Admirals, too.

It's the same with people on the home front. With Bankers and Clerks, Clergymen and Machinists, Teachers and Students, Housewives and Business Women . . . and Workers in the War Plants.

It's the same with you and me.

No matter who we are or where we are or what we do, we all have one thing in common: we want the newspaper . . . because we want the news.

TODAY, when so much is happening so quickly, this constant hunger for the news, this universal need for the newspaper is stronger than ever.

We need newspapers today not only for the news they bring, but for the guidance they give us; for the advice, instruction and information . . . in the ads as well as the news columns . . . which help us adjust our lives to these critical and constantly changing days.

We need newspapers to be well-informed. And a nation that is well-informed is a more secure nation, a better prepared nation, a more democratic nation . . . a nation more sure of progress and Victory.

a Patriotic Appeal

From Your

COAL DEALER

Federal authorities have warned that railroad transportation facilities may be urgently needed during the winter months for hauling war materials. The gas and rubber outlook is another problem which may make winter deliveries more difficult.

FOLLOW THESE SUGGESTIONS IN YOUR OWN INTEREST AS WELL AS THAT OF YOUR COUNTRY:

1—Order coal or coke in larger quantities.

2—Allow your coal dealer 24 hours in which to make delivery.

3—Pay cash. Don't ask for credit;

4—Order enough coal or coke this week to fill your bin.

Order From a Reliable Dealer.

NEW FIRST AID LEADER SOUGHT

Red Cross Hopes to Replace Hardy in Time to Start Regular Fall Work.

Richland county chapter of the Red Cross will employ a new first aid, water safety and accident prevent director by the time the fall program swings underway, Sept. 1, it was announced today by L. W. Birch, chapter chairman.

Interviews are now being conducted by R. D. Iden, chairman of the chapter finance committee, told the executive board at its July session Tuesday afternoon at Red Cross headquarters and the new director will be employed upon the recommendation of the national organization.

Bernard C. Hardy, first aid director the past year, resigned June 15 to accept a contract with the Cleveland Red Cross chapter.

The chapter headquarters will have the use of an additional room free of charge until Jan. 1, Birch said, through the courtesy of M. Dale Ward, from whom the organization rents its offices. The room formerly Ward's private office, will be occupied by the new home service director, Miss Esther Barneti.

Miss Bess Kinsey, new national field representative, met with the executive board for the first time yesterday and emphasized the wartime program as advocated at the recent state institute in Columbus.

No regular meeting will be held in August but a committee composed of Mrs. George Draffan, Mrs. W. J. Bishop, Allan Bond and Charles Fuchs, was appointed to arrange for a picnic for the executive group.

Rotarians See Color Pictures Of Mexican Trip

With a motor trip through Mexico barred "for the duration," Mansfield Rotarians at their Tuesday meeting were privileged to view color pictures and hear comments on a trip into the neighboring republic made last summer by Fred C. Snodgrass, of Cleveland, who is associated with the engineering department of the American Telephone and Telegraph company.

Views of Mexico City, pyramids, cathedrals, flowers, and scenes which serve to visualize ancient and modern Mexico were shown, each with brief explanation.

The speaker mentioned having had many inquiries about road conditions in Mexico and said that the worst stretch of highway encountered on the entire trip was on Route 3, in southern Ohio.

R. D. Iden was program chairman of the meeting, at which William C. Mead, past president, presided, in the absence of Harry B. Soulen, president, who is attending a Rotary district conference in Ashland.

Gandhi Threatens 'Peaceful' Revolt

WARDHA, India—(INS)—British officials in India today were faced with the threat of a "non-violent rebellion" if the British government fails to forfeit its rule of the country.

Urging that India be granted immediate complete independence, Mohandas K. Gandhi, influential leader of the all India congress party, declared:

"This is open rebellion. I conceive a mass movement on the widest possible scale, though purely of non-violent character."

Gandhi made his declaration following a meeting of the working committee of the congress party at which he was authorized to lead a new civil disobedience movement if the Indian mound for withdrawal of British rule is rejected.

"There is no room left for negotiations," Gandhi said. "Either they recognize India's independence or do not."

Stating that India wants its political freedom and recognition of its sovereignty through action and not on paper, Gandhi added that "it is my intention to make the movement as short and swift as possible."

County Budget Commission Has Few Requests as Yet.

The county budget commission already has started work on some of the early requests, examining them and sending them back to the subdivisions for revision in cases where the requests exceed the probable revenue for the year.
